W. A. Julian, Treasurer Of U. S., Dies In Collision

Official's Chest Crushed Against Steering Wheel; 2 Others Injured

William A. Julian, 87-year-old Treasurer of the United States, was killed instantly yesterday in a head-on automobile crash on River rd., Bethesda, Md.

He was on his way to a golf breakfast and his customary Sunday morning foursome at the Burning Tree Country Club when his car collided with another driven by Paul W. Smith, 24, a truck driver of River rd., RFD 3, Bethesda.

Smith was treated for cuts on his face and a bruised arm at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda. A passenger in Smith's car, William Ellis, 37, of Carderock, Md., was cut on the face and mouth and also treated at the hospital.

Chest Is Crushed

Montgomery County Medical Examiner Frank J. Broschart said Julian died of a ruptured aorta when his chest was crushed by the impact of his body with the steering wheel.

Julian's signature, as Treasurer of the United States, has appeared on every piece of paper currency issued by the Government since June 1, 1933, when he was appointed treasurer.

Montgomery County police said Julian, who was alone in his car, attempted to make a left turn into Burdette rd. as he neared the brow of a hill 3 miles from his home, Red Gables, Potomac rd., near Rockville, Md.

He had crossed the center line and was "cutting the corner," Smith told police. Smith, who was going north, over the crest of the hill, saw Julian's car and attempted to stop, police said. He skidded 40 feet before striking Julian's automobile head-on, the impact turning the car around and into a bank beside the road.

No charges were filed as a result of the accident.

The car was so badly smashed that the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad members had difficulty removing Julian's body from the wreckage. His watch had stopped at 8:45, the time of the accident.

The white-haired Treasurer had a chauffeur but loved to drive himself and did so whenever he could, a Treasury associate said.

Escaped Death in 1939

Julian had escaped death 10 years ago on the same road. In a collision in January, 1939, on River rd., near Wilson la., his car careened into a small hill 300 feet from the scene and turned over. He suffered lip cuts and chest bruises.

The body will rest at the Gawler funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave., after 7 p. m. today. Funeral services will be conducted by the Pumphrey funeral home at the Gawler chapel Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. Interment will be private in Ohio.

Julian had been Treasurer of the United States since the first year of the New Deal.

Brannan Calls His Plan Curb On Depression

Denies It's Too Costly Or Will Bring About Regimented Economy

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan conceded frankly yesterday that his controversial new farm program is designed to head off a possible depression.

He made the statement during an interview with Charles Parmer over radio station WPIK, Alexandria, in which he denied vigorously that the program would cost too much or result in a regimented farm economy.

Under his program, he said, present retail pork prices could drop 15 to 20 per cent without costing the taxpayers any more than the present farm price support program would cost.

Farm Subsidies "To Stay"

He said he isn't asking for any controls over farmers that aren't in the present law.

Brannan said critics who compare the possible cost of his plan with no plan at all are unfair. He said the principle of supporting farm prices is well established and is not likely to be discarded.

The Brannan plan calls for the Government to continue to support prices for storable crops such as corn and wheat through price support loans and purchase agreements.

But farmers would sell perishables, such as eggs and meat, for whatever they would bring. The Government then would pay the farmer the difference between the support and the market price.

Planning Against Depression

He conceded the plan probably could be improved but that it seemed to offer the best available answer to surpluses and low farm prices.

"In other words, you are planning against a possible depression; is that it?" Parmer asked.

"Sure," Brannan replied.

He said past economic history shows that farm prices are the first to be effected in poor times. When the farmer's income drops, it slows down the rest of the economy, he said.

"Now, I don't say you can insure against depressions by just keeping the farmers in good condition," he said. "But I do say that that is one of the places where, if you are interested in fighting depression, you ought to apply some of your efforts."

Reds Free Baby Whale; Drank Too Much Milk

Moscow, May 29 (U.P.).—The crew of the Russian whaling ship Slava reported from Odessa today it had caught the first live baby sperm whale in history during a hunt in the Antarctic.

Unfortunately, the crew members said, they had no proof since the ship's biologist ordered the whale set free because he required more than a ton of condensed milk daily to stay alive.

Bolivians Kill 2 Americans In Mine Riot

3 Others Mauled; 150 Soldiers and Strikers Reported Dead in Fighting

(From Press Dispatches)

LaPaz, Bolivia, May 29.—Two American engineers and one Bolivian were beaten to death yesterday by striking miners, the general manager of the Patino tin mines in Catavi said today. Another United States engineer was reported missing.

Approximately 100 workmen and 50 soldiers also have been reported killed in fighting which followed the walkout at the rich tin mines Saturday.

D. C. Derringer, the general manager, said the slain Americans were T. H. O'Connor, Pasadena, Calif., and Albert Drefting, Seattle, Wash. The third victim was a Bolivian named Vargas.

Among 15 Hostages

Derringer said they were among 15 hostages seized by the strikers. The group included seven United States engineers, seven Bolivians and one Argentine.

The general manager said these men were hospitalized: Wilbur J. Cook, Reno, Nev., and Pat Green and Floyd W. Erickson, no addresses given.

Whereabouts of another American engineer, H. T. Peterson, Biwabik, Minn., is unknown.

Previously Erckison had been reported slain—on the basis of an account by Cook, who was said to have escaped from union headquarters. Cook was so severely beaten he collapsed soon after reporting Erickson had died from a gunshot through the head.

The names of the other two Americans who were abducted were given as Richard D. Elette and T. R. Woods-Smith. Their home towns were not listed.

Fighting with Dynamite

Strikers armed with sticks of dynamite were reported battling army troops.

The United States Embassy here sent a plane to evacute dependents of Americans.

The miners, few of whom can read or write, stopped work to protest the arrest and deportation of Juan Lechin, Bolivia's most powerful labor leader and head of the tin miners' union.

The government charged Lechin had opened his union to followers of the late Lieut. Col. Gualberto Villarroel and other subversive elements, including Communists, and was the mastermind of a vast plot to embroil Bolivia in civil war.

Trouble has been brewing at the Patino properties for a long time. It was precipitated by Thursday night's cabinet meeting presided over by Mamerto Urriolagoitia, acting president while Enrique Hertzog is on sick leave. The arrest of 65 political and union leaders and army officers was ordered. The arrests began Friday morning.

Urriolagoitia asserted "the government has documents proving that a general strike was being fomented throughout the country as a prologue to unleashing a civil war that would have destroyed the foundations of the motherland."

7 Saved as Boat From D. C. Sinks In ChesapeakeBay

A 26-foot boat, the We Two, from Washington, sank off Love Point, Md., last night, but seven persons aboard were all reported rescued.

The We Two was owned by Wilbur M. Sherwood, 1701 16th st. nw., the Coast Guard at Norfolk said. Love Point is just across Chesapeake Bay from Annapolis.

The Coast Guard said the sinking occurred about 9:30 p. m. The rescued were taken by another boat, the Seafarer, to Love Point.

Names of the persons aboard could not be learned immediately, the Coast Guard said, nor how the accident occurred.

Bishop Calls For Inquiry Into Crimes

Methodist Descries Danger of Calamity In 'Continuing Orgy'

The executive vice president of the Methodist Board of Temperance last night called for a presidential commission to investigate the Nation's "continuing orgy of crime."

Pointing out that "we are in danger of being overwhelmed by a calamity of major proportions," Bishop Wilbur E. Hammaker declared that "some official cognizance of our frightful disregard of all human rights by the criminally inclined section of our population is due—long overdue."

Bishop Hammaker, whose headquarters are at 100 Maryland ave. ne., declared in a public statement that "stories of all sorts of horrible crimes stain the pages of our papers and worse than that, stain the lives of our people."

"America is beginning to sense the significance of the abounding and increasing wave of lawlessness. It is more than a wave. It is a great and rising tide," the bishop declared.

In the twenties and early thirties, the temperance leader said, blame for bad conditions was placed on the dry forces and prohibition. It would seem fair, he said, to blame present conditions on repeal and legalized liquor.

Citing recent sex murders and other crimes, the bishop declared that "in almost every instance of brutal murder or horrible crime, the reporter on the trail soon scents alcohol."

"The matter is so extremely serious that others than 'reformers' and 'near reformers' should be taking a hand," Bishop Hammaker declared, adding that "morals are not luxuries — they are necessities."

Pastors Urge Votes Against Slot Machines

Sermons Oppose Legalized Gambling In Prince Georges

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Prince Georges County, Md., clergymen yesterday urged their congregations to get out and vote against legalization of slot machines in a referendum Thursday.

Voters will decide whether to legalize cash payoffs for electrically operated console-type slot machines and pinball games in the county-wide referendum. "One-armed bandit" type machines would be outlawed.

The Hyattsville Ministerial Union has distributed 10,000 antigambling leaflets in the past two weeks. Church groups will continue to pass out the phamphlets this week.

The Rev. H. R. Hodgson, pastor of Takoma Park Methodist Church, devoted his entire sermon to a discussion of the question, "Should We Legalize Gambling in Prince Georges County?"

Stating he would vote against legalization, Mr. Hodgson asserted the proposed regulation could not be enforced and would play into the hands of crooks and racketeers in other cities.

He said he believed legalized gambling would tend to corrupt local officials and police. Passage of the law on grounds it would yield funds needed for operation of county institutions would be "false economy," he said.

"When the state gives legal sanction to a moral evil it encourages people to indulge in that evil," the clergyman declared.

The Rev. Roy H. Stettler, pastor of the Cheverly Community Church, warned an adult Sunday School class against legalized slot machines and pointed out that the Evangelical United Brethren, with which the church is affiliated, is opposed to gambling in any form.

Boy Scouts from the church will distribute leaflets in Cheverly on Tuesday and Wednesday, he said.

Truman Sees Middies Open June Week

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., May 29.—Under the lofty dome of the Naval Academy's chapel, President Truman today joined 791 midshipmen in services which launched traditional June Week.

All members of this year's graduating class, the midshipmen marched to the chapel in two long columns of spotless white and gleaming gold. With their commander in chief, they heard Navy Chaplain Roy E. Bishop of Blackstone, Va., deliver the baccalaureate sermon dedicating them to a life of service to their country.

"It is essential that we recognize early," said Commander Bishop, "the fact that life simply cannot be lived alone. Life must be lived in the midst of and in view of others. It is only as we enlarge the area of our own lives to include the lives of others that we grow in understanding and in spiritual stature."

The President came ashore at Phlox Landing from the presidential yacht Williamsburg, anchored in the Severn River, at 10:25 a. m. He was dressed in a light tan double-breasted suit, with a tan felt hat and brown and white shoes.

In excellent spirits, he returned the salute of Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., academy superintendent, and turned to the correspondents and photographers at the end of the gangway.

"The order is," he said with a broad grin, "that every single one of you will have to go to church."

Someone told him that today was the forty-sixth birthday of Associated Press Correspondent Ernest B. (Tony) Vaccaro and Mr. Truman

Church in Prague Forbidden to Pass Collection Plate

Prague, May 29 (AP).—Priests in the Roman Catholic Church of the Holy Cross announced at services today that the Czechoslovak government has forbidden collections. They said no formal collection would be taken hereafter.

The church is situated in the center of Prague. One worshiper who attended services said no police were in evidence.

Last Sunday police invaded the sacristy of the Church of St. Ignatius after a collection was taken and demanded that the money be turned over to them. The priests refused. No further action was taken.

Berlin Strike Threatened War, Reds Told

Nuschke Says Russian 'Desire for Peace' Kept Strife From Arising

Berlin, May 29 (AP).—A speaker at the Communist-led Eastern German People's Congress asserted today that "only the Soviet Union's love of peace" has prevented the Berlin railway strike from flaring into a third world war.

Dr. Otto Nuschke, chairman of the Soviet-licensed Christian Democratic Party in eastern Germany, charged that United States Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley's recent expulsion of Soviet-controlled railway police from American sector yards "could have set the whole machinery of the Atlantic Pact in motion."

"We should be grateful to the Soviet Union for its love of peace and restraint in the face of this provocation," Nuschke said. Two thousand Soviet-approved delegates cried: "Send Howley home!"

Russia's new policy of "back to Potsdam"—four-power rule of Germany—as outlined by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky at Paris, has scuttled the Communists' nationalistic propaganda and cast gloom on the People's Congress.

Congress speakers turned their invective on the anti-Communist railway strike. Most abuse was heaped on Howley, American commandant in Berlin.

Delegates assembled dispiritedly in the East Berlin Opera House. Chairman Wilhelm Pieck, just back from an official rest cure in the Soviet Union, disclosed that the congress must rubber stamp these Russian proposals:

1. Four-power control of Germany far into the future.

2. More reparations, but with a "medium living standard" left to German workers.

Pieck rammed through "unanimous" approval by a show of hands of an election committee which will prepare a single list of delegates to go to the Paris Big Four Conference to "speak for Germany."

Monday the congress is to vote on the delegates to go to Paris, elect a people's council to act as a shadow German government and ratify an all-German constitution.

Pact to Spur Trade Held Reds' Real Aim at Paris

Economic Accord, Not German Unity, Is Believed Sought In Big 4 Meetings

By Walter Kerr

Paris, May 29 (NYHT).—Despite differences of opinion during the first week of discussions in the Council of Foreign Ministers, limited economic agreement on Germany tonight is considered not only possible but probable.

It now is clear that Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet Foreign Minister, came to Paris for this purpose, and not for the complicated negotiation involved in trying to achieve political and economic unity.

It is also becoming apparent that it was for this same purpose his government lifted its blockade of Berlin May 12.

Shift Highly Important

This development is of the utmost importance. Its origin can be traced to a shift in Kremlin policy that has become intelligible to the Western Powers only in the past few days. It is based on a decision to continue temporarily the political division of Germany and to work for an economic understanding that will make available to the East industrial products and raw materials of western Europe.

Vishinsky, therefore, is expected to reject at Monday's meeting a Western proposal submitted Saturday that all Germany be united under the Bonn constitution. His primary interest is in a limited working arrangement with the West; he attempted to indicate this last week when he refused to be drawn out on reparations and other controversial subjects involved in over-all unification.

He did not want to talk about them. He struggled instead to confine discussions to his own program for the establishment of an all-German state council for economic and administrative affairs.

Currency Solution Sought

The broad outlines of this plan, as explained at the council's first business meeting, also include settlement of the double-currency problem, unification of a divided Berlin and reimposition of four-power controls.

In negotiation yet to take place the last point may be the most difficult, with the Russians trying to restore the veto power over a wide field and the West determined to limit it to such security matters as demilitarization and denazification.

It is difficult to say whether or not the Kremlin's new German policy means permanent abandonment of the program enunciated a year ago at a Warsaw conference of Eastern European States.

At that time the announced objectives were political unification, a speedy peace treaty, withdrawal of occupation troops a year later, reparations and four-power control of the Ruhr.

Now the emphasis is on delay, a modus vivendi with the Western Powers, and access to the steel of the Ruhr and other products of Western Europe.

It was in accordance with the

Russians Close Their Consulate In Shanghai

Shanghai, May 29 (AP).—The Russians today closed their consulate in Communist Shanghai.

"A new regime which our government does not officially recognize has come to Shanghai; we are not remaining open," a Soviet spokesman said.

This follows the example of Soviet consulates in Communist Peiping and Tientsin.

The Soviet Ambassador accompanied the Nationalist government from Nanking to Canton last February, nearly three months before the Communists took Nanking. He was the only ambassador to do so.

The official Soviet Tass news agency announced that it would close its Shanghai bureau in a few days.

Lapham Back From China

San Francisco, May 29 (U.P.).—Former San Francisco Mayor Roger D. Lapham, Economic Cooperation Administrator for China, arrived here tonight by plane from Hongkonk and said he would continue to Washington soon to report to ECA Chief Paul Hoffman.

He said he did not know whether or not he would be sent back to China, but said a staff of 30 Americans, headed by Col. Allen Griffin, continued to man the ECA office in Canton.

106,000 Going Back to Jobs

Ford Strike Settlement Wins Ratification by Union Vote

(Picture on Page 7)

Detroit, May 29 (U.P.).—The longest strike in the history of the Ford Motor Co. ended today when members of the CIO United Auto Workers at the company's River Rouge and Detroit plants ratified a settlement plan which will send 106,000 idle workers back to their jobs.

The rank-and-file acceptance ended the 25-day walkout and sent the major issue of the "speedup" dispute to arbitration.

Local 600 of the River Rouge plant announced the vote as 2423 for settlement and 377 opposed.

Several thousand members who raised their hands in favor of the plan at a mass meeting apparently were so certain the strike was over that they did not bother to cast their secret ballots, the union said.

Cheers went up as the show of hands indicated the plan was approved. The formal vote was required under the UAW constitution.

Union members cheered heartily when UAW President Walter P. Reuther promised to put an anti-speedup clause in the new Ford contract, even though the union loses its case in arbitration.

"We do not have a complete victory," Reuther said, "but we have passed a milestone."

He said that none of the other UAW locals had secured a written agreement on constant line speeds. This was the first point in the settlement plan.

Left-wing elements in the local caused a brief flurry of opposition to ratifying the plan. One dissenter spoke briefly against settlement but he was booed strongly.

Handbills urging the Rouge workers to vote against the settlement plan were passed out as the union members filed into a high school football stadium for the voting, but union spokesmen identified the opposition as a "small left-wing minority."

Ratification of the agreement reached earlier today writes the official end of the 25-day strike, the second longest in automotive history.

Weary negotiators, who had been holding continuous sessions, crawled over the last barrier to settlement early today by agreeing on a method of choosing an arbitrator who will decide the vital "speedup" issue which started the crippling walkout at noon, May 5.

Wording of the question to be arbitrated and six minor points were settled before the negotiators stalled temporarily on selection of an umpire. A three-step

Tax Survey's Mystery Story

Over a Million 'Ghosts' Roam Maryland's Hills and Dales

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—State Comptroller James J. Lacy had before him today figures indicating Maryland has a "ghost population" of more than one million.

The figures are contained in a survey of State income tax returns. The first such analysis since the levy went into effect in 1937, it was made by the Retail Sales Tax Division.

There are 2,147,343 Maryland residents, the survey notes from the last official census. But, it points out, only 1,099,347 are accounted for in the tax returns.

This includes taxpayers and the dependents they list.

The difference of 1,047,996, the survey indicates, can be divided into two groups:

1. Persons making less than $1000 a year and having no dependents, and those with dependents but making less than $2000 (they are exempt from the levy.)

2. Tax dodgers.

In some counties low incomes are why only a small fraction of the population is reflected in the tax returns, the analysis said.

But, they added, it is doubtful this is true in such subdivisions as Frederick and Carroll Counties. Returns from the former account for only 20,854 of the 60,569 residents and in Carroll for only 14,117 of 42,430.

The breakdown on nearby counties showed Montgomery 71,326 of 119,602, and Prince Georges, 61,368 of 130,500.

'Bold New Program'

U. N. Experts Urge 30 Million As Outlay for Technical Aid

Havana, Cuba, May 29 (U.P.).—United Nations experts have proposed a first-year outlay of 30 million dollars for helping to carry out President Truman's "bold new program" of technical aid to backward countries, U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie disclosed tonight.

The target figure was set in the course of an American-inspired U. N. survey designed to map a broad technical-aid plan along the lines laid down in Mr. Truman's Inauguration Day proposal. The entire report will be released Thursday.

Lie disclosed the budget figure in a speech prepared for delivery at the opening here of the second meeting of the U. N. Economic Commission for Latin America.

Lie said the survey report "calls for the collaboration of all member governments of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies in the provision of services, supplies and funds. It is planned as a truly international program to which all member governments should make their contributions, however modest these may have to be in some instances."

He noted with satisfaction that, according to a U.N. survey of Latin-American economic development, recent progress has been made in some economic fields. But he warned that "Latin America still faces many difficult problems."

In particular, he added, Latin-American countries "are confronted with a need for faster economic development."

Action by Congress On AEC Requested

By The Associated Press

Two Senators proposed yesterday that Congress take into its own hands the tightening of secrecy guards around atomic energy development.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, and Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), said in separate interviews they think Congress ought to define in law the final responsibility for deciding who is and who isn't a good security risk.

Ferguson suggested that the FBI —which now investigates all persons doing secret AEC work but reports without recommendations —be directed to decide whether the persons they have investigated are good risks.

Now Up to Security Officer

At present the commission puts the decision up to its security officer, although Chairman David E. Lilienthal testified that the commission had overruled his decision in at least two instances.

At the same time, Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), a member of the Senate-House Atomic Committee, told a reporter he thinks some method has to be found to make it certain that the Atomic Energy Commission follow "fundamental security processes." He added "that has not been done."

"It is not enough to publish security regulations," he said. "Some way must be found to make it certain they are being followed through."

Alludes to Loss of Uranium

Knowland apparently alluded to the disappearance from the AEC's Argonne laboratory, at Chicago, of about an ounce of uranium oxide, a radioactive chemical. The AEC has reported all of this has been recovered from wastage except one-seventh of an ounce.

Lilienthal has said that a "human error" was responsible for this case.

But the Senate-House Committee meeting Tuesday to map an investigation program, is expected to delve deeper into security regulations as a result.

Wherry and Ferguson are members of a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee which will meet Tuesday in closed session to act on a money bill carrying funds for AEC operations in the year beginning July 1.

Lilienthal Meets Further Opposition

By the United Press

David E. Lilienthal encountered some more opposition yesterday to his request for a congressional investigation of all phases of the civilian-controlled atomic energy program.

Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, requested an inquiry which would determine "without peradventure" whether the atomic program is in better shape now than when the commission took it over from the Army in 1947.

But Senators Johnson (D., Colo.) and Knowland (R., Calif.), both members of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee, said yesterday the comparison has nothing to do with the investigation which will begin Tuesday.

They agreed with Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) that the paramount issue is present security policies of the commission. Lilienthal wants the committee to compare his security record with that of Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, head of the Army's Manhattan Project.

On Alleged Order

Msgr. O'Hara Hit by Paper In Bucharest

Bucharest, Romania, May 29 (AP).—Scanteia, official newspaper of the Workers Party, charged today the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Bishop of Savannah-Atlanta, Ga., and papal regent to Romania, had instructed Roman Catholic bishops in Romania to adopt "antidemocratic political activity."

The paper said Msgr. O'Hara promised Romanian bishops the support of the United States and had given his instructions as far back as 1946.

The Workers Party is a merger of Communists and Socialists, and "antidemocratic activity" is a phrase customarily used to describe opposition to the Communist-dominated government.

The article appeared after a Ministry of Religion decision to take two Roman Catholic bishops and 130 Catholic priests and dignitaries off the state payroll for "antidemocratic activity."

Catholic priests, in common with the clergy of several other denominations in Romania, are paid by the state.

The two bishops are Aron Marton, bishop of Alba Iulia, and Anton Turkovici, bishop of Iasi. There are five Roman Catholic bishoprics in Romania.

Czechs Plan State Schools

Prague, May 29 (AP).—The Czechoslovak Communist "victory" congress ended today with rank and file approval for a program that includes complete state control of all education. The action was taken despite the protests of the Roman Catholic Church.

From the opening speaker—President Klement Gottwald, who is chairman of the party—to the last, it was stressed that the country must become completely Communist according to the theories of Marx and Lenin.

The speakers made clear that Czechoslovakia must follow all the rules laid down by Moscow and "by our great teacher, Generalissimo Stalin."

Because the Communists, who seized power in February, 1948, control the government, congress directs the path that Czechoslovakia must take under its present leaders.

Two speakers stressed especially that the Communist government will insure that children are reared in the Marxist-Lenin faith.

They were Minister of Information and Enlightenment Vaclav Kopecky and Minister of Schools and Arts Zdenek Nejedly.

"We claim the right of the state to administer all schools without exception and we claim the right of the state to direct all school and extra-curricular education, in the spirit of our ideology, in the spirit of our scientific truth, in the spirit of the Marx-Lenin teaching," Kopecky said.

He said the majority of Catholic believers and priests favored the government program and he insisted there was religious freedom in the country.

Nejedly said secondary schools remain "a nest of reaction" but he described steps taken to create a new kind of grammar school into which 25 new textbooks "quite dissimilar from the former ones" are being introduced.

Red Armies Tighten Tsingtao Siege Ring, Capture Tsimo

Shanghai, May 29 (U.P.).—Communists completed the replacement of Shanghai's civil administration today, and the Red radio reported Communist armies tightening a siege ring around Tsingtao, former United States naval base and last major north China city still in Nationalist hands.

The broadcast said Red troops had captured Tsimo, 25 miles north of Tsingtao on the Shantung peninsula. It said two Nationalist regiments surrendered at Tsimo.

Reporting on developments in south China, the radio said a large area of eastern Kwangtung Province, of which Canton is the capital, was being softened by the defection of Nationalist troops. It said two regiments of militia went over to the Communists and occupied four county seats near the Fukien Province border.

The radio reported large quantities of food, fuel and other commodities were being rushed to Shanghai to ease shortages resulting from the Red siege.

The broadcast said more than 70,000 tons of grain were to be delivered to Shanghai during the first month of "liberation."

Supplies of fuel were expected to assure continued operation of the Shanghai utilities, which now have only a two weeks supply. Coal and oil for the utilities have been supplied by the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Starting Monday, the radio said, 300 Shanghai banks will be authorized to take the new Communist "jen min pao" currency in exchange for the Nationalist gold yuan notes. The gold yuan notes must be out of circulation by June 5. The official rate of exchange was set as 100,000 gold yuan for one Peoples' Bank yuan.

of paper money, Julian was little known to the general public.

To his friends in the Treasury, Julian was known as a philosophical and friendly man, a good conversationalist who spiced his speech with many epigrams.

However, he was very reticent about himself, and especially reluctant to discuss his age, which he usually gave as "over 72." His associates said he was about 87. He hated publicity so much that he sometimes refused even to speak to reporters covering the Treasury.

Mr. Julian's wife, Mrs. Gertrude Means Julian, daughter of a former Mayor of Cincinnati, died last March at the age of 80. They were childless, and his nearest survivors are several nieces and nephews.

Born on a farm near Frankfort, Ky., he was a bank clerk and successful shoe salesman before becoming a shoe manufacturer and bank president in Ohio.

Talking with friends recently about his early jobs, Mr. Julian seemed to be most proud of his success in selling shoes all over Europe, as well as the British Isles, without knowing any foreign languages.

Though a lifelong Democrat and onetime national committeeman, he turned down various offers of public office until President Roosevelt persuaded him to come to Washington to overhaul the Nation's fiscal system in the middle of the depression. He took office on June 1, 1933.

The office which he headed is essentially a banking facility for the Government. It is particularly charged with the receipt, disbursement and accounting for public moneys, the custody, issuance and redemption of currency and coin, safekeeping of securities and payment of public debt.

Mr. Julian resigned as Democratic national committeeman from Ohio in August, 1934, in response to an order issued by the then Secretary of the Treasury, Henry A. Morgenthau. He had informed Treasury employes they must resign any party offices they might have if they wished to continue with the department.

The Treasurer was again in the news in 1944, when he purchased at auction for $130,000 some 167,000 acres of land in Dare County, N. C. This was more than half the county.

A graduate of Dodds College at Frankfort, Ky., in 1888, Mr. Julian later moved across the Ohio River to Cincinnati, where he settled and became active in State Democratic politics.

Ran for Senate in 1920

He ran unsuccessfully for the United States Senate in Ohio in 1920, and after that stayed behind the scenes politically. He retired from active business about 1923, reputedly as a millionaire, retaining three bank directorships. He became president of the First National Bank of Bethel, Ohio, and of the Queen City Trust Co. of Cincinnati. For more than 20 years he was president of the Associated Charities of Cincinnati.

An ardent vegetarian, he championed the philosophy of the simple life. In the depression years, he advocated a return to farm life. After he became Treasurer, he purchased Red Gables, the farm estate on Potomac rd., near Rockvill, where he was living at the time of his death. He had lived alone there, except for servants, since the death of his wife.

He appeared broken up by the death of his wife in March, but was on the job every day and "extremely active" in planning future policies, associates said. Mrs. Julian's will received some publicity because she failed to bequeath any of her $10,000 estate to her husband.

One of Julian's ancestors was an apothecary in Fredericksburg, Va., who received a grant of land in Kentucky as a reward for his services to George Washington during the Revolutionary War. The land is still owned by the family, and the apothecary shop in Fredericksburg was recently restored.

He was a trustee of Borea College in Kentucky and made several large gifts to other educational institutions as well, including the University of Richmond.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said yesterday he was shocked at the news of the Treasurer's death. He praised Mr. Julian's "unusual administrative ability, integrity, judgment and balance—qualities which endeared him to the Treasury family and made possible the many fine achievements of his tenure."

He said Mr. Julian's 16 years as Treasurer constitute an "invaluable contribution to the Government."

adopted order of business that extension of the "basic law of Bonn" was suggested to the Soviet delegation yesterday by United States Secretary of State Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Bevin, and French Foreign Minister Schuman.

Vishinsky commented on it only briefly, but he did take the trouble to say that as long ago as 1947 his own government had urged political unification.

Schuman Says West Now Hopes for Accord

Strasbourg, May 29 (NYHT).—French Foreign Minister Schuman said here today the Western Allies now were able to hope for a modus vivendi (means of getting along) with the Soviet Union, thanks to the Western Powers following the policy "built on firmness and comprehension."

Addressing the annual convention of the Popular Republican Movement (MRP), Schuman said one of the first fruits of the Western Powers' unity was "the abandonment of the policy of the cold war."

He recalled to his audience he had come from the Big Four meeting in Paris where the great powers are trying to settle the future of Germany.

"It will be, perhaps, difficult to obtain a complete solution for Central Europe, for Germany," said Schuman. "But at least we have the hope of being able to establish a modus vivendi that should be neither a trap nor a dupery and which should be valid for Berlin as well as for the rest of Germany."

The modus vivendi was the minimum expected, Schuman emphasized.

"I firmly hope," he said, "it is yet too soon to be certain, that we (the Big Four) are engaged in a step for the return of peace."

Red, Out for Bonn Session, Back in Jail

Duesseldorf, Germany, May 29 (AP).—Max Reimann, west Germany's No. 1 Communist, was arrested today and immediately returned to jail here to serve out a three-month prison sentence.

He was given the jail term last January after being convicted by a British court of making inflammatory speeches. He was furloughed after serving 12 days to permit him to serve as a delegate to the Bonn convention, which drafted western Germany's new constitution.

The order went out to pick him up as soon as the Bonn delegates finished the job, but Reimann eluded officers for five days.

Five persons were injured early yesterday when the auto in which they were riding, collided with a Capital Transit Co. bus at 1st and B sts. ne.

Mrs. Doris Walker, 29, of 4902 B st. ne., was admitted to Casualty Hospital in undetermined condition with a back injury. The other four were treated at Casualty Hospital and released. They were:

Mrs. Walker's husband, Robert, 32, bruises to right leg and hip; William E. Hughes, 29, of 4682 Homer ave. se., driver of the car, cut on the forehead; his wife, Audrey, 27, cut lip; Edward J. Williams, 24, of 4222 14th st. nw., face cuts.

The bus was driven by Julian E. Oliff, jr., 24, of 4350 34th st., Mount Rainier, Md., police said.

Leon F. Tradewind, 21, a machinist, of 119 4th st. se., escaped with scratches to his face, after he apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his convertible car, which jumped the curb, knocked down a bus sign, struck a tree and then overturned on its side in the 3900 block Benning rd. ne., last Saturday night, police said.

John Lyddane, 27, of 1811 Irving st. ne., was in Providence Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull yesterday as a result of an auto accident near TB, Md.

Maryland State police said the car in which he was riding turned over into a ditch early yesterday. Lyddane was brought to the hospital here at 6:40 a. m.

Stalin Stresses Russia as Base For Revolution

London, May 29 (AP).—The tenth volume of the collected works of Prime Minister Stalin "stresses the importance of the USSR as a base for the world revolutionary movement," Moscow Radio said today.

Quoting reviews of the volume in Moscow newspapers, the broadcast said the book contains Stalin's writings between August and December, 1927.

An article on the October, 1917, revolution which put the Communists in power in Russia, outlines "the need to defend the Soviet Union from attack by imperialists," the reviews said.

Huge Salazar Dam Opens in Portugal

Lisbon, Portugal, May 29 (AP).—Salazar Dam, Portugal's largest hydroelectric project, was officially opened today. The project, composed of two dams about 25 miles apart, cost $10,800,000.

The two are expected to have an annual hydroelectric power output of 10 million kilowatts.

In addition, irrigation canals several miles long and running through hitherto infertile areas are expected to increase the country's farm lands.

At 100-Mile Clip

Road Block Halts Car in Fast Chase

A New York State motorist was booked on three traffic charges by Fairfax County police yesterday, following a high-speed chase that, police said, covered 38 miles in 22 minutes.

The driver was identified by police as Chibous Charles Henry Logan, 36, a concrete finisher, of Elmira, N. Y. He was charged with reckless driving, exceeding 100 miles an hour, and driving the wrong way on a one-way road. He was released under $500 bond for hearing June 6.

Logan was arrested shortly after 6 a. m. by Sergt. James Thomas, on Route 1, about a mile north of Fredericksburg, when he ran into a roadblock hastily set up by Fredericksburg police.

Acting on a radio request from Fairfax, the Fredericksburg officers utilized passing traffic and effectively blocked the highway with an assortment of trucks, buses and cars.

Thomas said he picked up the chase at Engleside, Va., after receiving a radio message from Pvt. J. G. Hollowell, whose cruiser was outdistanced by Logan's Buick convertible. Thomas, driving a newly delivered Pontiac, managed to keep the fleeing car in sight, but radioed for help when he found he was unable to close the gap.

At one point in the chase, Thomas said, the two cars thundered at a 100-mile-an-hour clip along a two-mile stretch of one-way road, driving in the wrong direction. They met no oncoming traffic.

At the Fredericksburg roadblock, according to Thomas, Logan had to swerve sharply and drive into the yard of a tourist camp to avert crashing into the assembled vehicles. He said the police car skidded and nearly overturned in coming to a stop.

Arrested with Logan were two passengers, who were booked as material witnesses, and released under $200 bond each pending the hearing. They were identified as Robert Bristow, 30, of Elmira, and Clement S. Smith, 31, of New York City.

Hoover Bill Backers Prepare Long Fight

Despite 'Economy'

Greater U. S. Spending in '50 Forecast

By The Associated Press

Administration sources predicted yesterday that despite mounting economy talk, Government spending will be higher in the next fiscal year than this one, and even larger in the year ending June 30, 1951.

That forecast was made yesterday by two members of President Truman's fiscal family. Stipulating that they must not be identified, they gave what they called a "realistic appraisal" of the outlook:

1. Spending, scheduled in the budget to hit about 42 billion dollars in fiscal 1950 (which begins next July 1) after a $1,700,000,000 rise over this year, will be "a little higher, but not much" in fiscal 1951.

2. That will mark the postwar crest, and will be followed by a gradual downtrend—provided that prospects are borne out for some easing of international tension, plus a reasonably high level of business and employment.

Operating at a Deficit

3. Meanwhile, the Government will necessarily be operating at a deficit of increasing size through the two coming fiscal years unless Congress increases taxes on a scale few if any now expect.

4. The 1950 and 1951 deficits appear likely to be magnified by a decline in Government revenues. The range of estimates on the revenue drop ranges from about two billion to four billion dollars, depending on the state of the Nation's business.

While no specific forecasts were made on the size of the 1950 and 1951 deficits, they would come out at three billion to five billion dollars on revenue drops of the size mentioned, since deficits of around one billion dollars would be likely even if revenue receipts were sustained.

No Forced Outlays

The officials made it plain that their forecasts of a two-year phase of rising spending did not count on deliberate action to increase Federal outlays as a means of offsetting a decline in business and employment.

On the contrary, they said the forecasts anticipate that President Truman will continue to hold public works programs below the amounts authorized for them by Congress in past years.

The forecasts do, however, take into account higher costs from an economic downturn in such forms as heavier outlays on farm price supports, greater expenses of handling employment compensation claims, job placement, etc.

The officials observed that the spending outlook for any given year is built up for the most part by actions — policy decisions backed with appropriations or contract authorizations — taken in previous years, and cannot be radically altered in that year alone or on its eve.

Also, pay increases and veterans' benefits voted in one year are not just a one-year increase, but a continuing lift to spending that is reflected in all subsequent budgets. So are vast numbers of other programs that have been authorized in recent years.

By The Associated Press

Hopes dwindled yesterday that any major part of the Government reforms proposed by the Hoover Commission can go into effect before 1950 at the earliest.

Foreseeing a long fight, a Nation-wide citizens committee was drafting plans for a "grass roots" campaign to bring pressure on Congress members, plus an advertising drive to arouse public support.

Nearly 25 per cent of the streamlining and merging of Federal bureaus, as outlined by former President Herbert Hoover's official commission, could be done at a stroke by passage of the bill giving broad reorganization powers to President Truman.

Snagged in Congress

The bill is snagged in a House-Senate disagreement. Mr. Truman says he has a "number" of reorganization plans, built on the Hoover pattern, ready and waiting to send to Capitol Hill the minute it becomes law.

But each of his plans would have to lie before Congress 60 days before going into effect. If Congress is to adjourn on schedule July 31, the bill must be passed and signed by Wednesday. Otherwise all presidential plans must wait until the start of the 1950 session in January.

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.), chairman of the Executive Expenditures Committee, said yesterday there is no prospect of getting a compromise in the House-Senate conference committee in the next few days. Some members are absent and the differences are wide.

Adjournment May Be Delayed

'But it's not hopeless; for one thing, there's plenty of chance that Congress won't adjourn on schedule," he told a reporter. McClellan was a member of the 12-man Hoover Commission.

Perhaps a third of the Hoover proposals—the less important ones—can be put into effect merely by presidential order, without new legislation. The rest require either the blanket reorganization law or individual consideration by Congress. The jammed work sheets in House and Senate leave little room this session for piece-by-piece legislation.

Meanwhile the Citizens' Committee for Reorganization set up offices here and in New York and Philadelphia, and mobilized for a long battle. It includes two former Vice Presidents, Charles G. Dawes and John Nance Garner; scores of former Cabinet officers, Governors, and top-rung Federal officials; the presidents of AFL, CIO and leading farm and business organizations.

Under the leadership of Robert L. Johnson, president of Temple University, the committee is well advanced on a triple-barreled campaign calling for a concerted drive in Washington, financed by private contributions and carried on by pamphlets, publicity, speakers and testimony on Capitol Hill; formation of State committees in every State, and a campaign to build up a public demand for reform.

Congress Urged Not to Repeal Fair Trade Act

By The Associated Press

The National Federation of Independent Business, Inc., asked Congress yesterday to kill an attempt to repeal the fair trade practices law.

It said small businessmen fear a return of the "cutthroat pricing tactics of some giant firms on nationally branded and advertised goods.

"They recall the high small business mortality rate this produced and how the reckless use of branded goods as 'loss leaders' increased the concentration of business in the hands of the giants," it said.

Representative Donald O'Toole (D., N. Y.) has introduced a bill which would repeal the Miller-Tydings Act authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to establish "fair trade" practices.

Service Wives Launch Fight To Put Over Pay Rise Measure

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Wives of officers and enlisted men of the armed forces here have launched a fight to put over the once-rejected military pay increase bill.

Aroused over the "injustice" of last Tuesday's vote in the House, they've formed a "war council" and started to besiege Congress.

The vanguard already patrols Capitol corridors, pushing baby carriages and leading tots by the hand, buttonholing home-State Congressmen. But the main attack is planned for Wednesday morning—a mass rally in the rotunda of the old House Office Building.

"We left it to the men and they failed," said Mrs. Dorothea Harrison Rodimon, 1901 Wyoming ave. nw. "Now we're taking over."

Called Blow to Morale

"We feel that if our Representatives in Congress know the true facts about the pay bill, they'll approve it. Last Tuesday's action in the House was a terrible blow to the morale of service families all over the country."

Mrs. Rodimon heads an informal committee composed of wives of officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps. The group operates "like a pyramid club," she told The Washington Post.

"Each woman joining the fight agrees to call two or four other wives and ask them to appear at Wednesday's rally and call their friends to do likewise."

Mrs. Alice Brough Baumer, 3724 Northampton st. nw., another member of the "war council," says that "we're also writing our home town newspapers, Congressmen and friends back home. I'm writing everyone on my Christmas card list."

Compromise Plan Readied

Meanwhile, leaders of the House Armed Services Committee were hard at work on a compromise pay bill which they expect to bring back to the House floor within two weeks. It will cut back the increases proposed in the original bill for generals and give greater increases to lower-ranking officers and to enlisted men.

It was reported that the following has been tentatively agreed to by some sponsors and opponents of the original bill:

Major generals and above: An increase of about 15 per cent instead of 34 per cent;

Brigadier generals: 18 instead of 49.5 per cent;

Colonels: 20 instead of 25 per cent;

Lieutenant colonels: 25 instead of 20 per cent;

Majors: 30 instead of 23 per cent;

Captains, first and second lieutenants: 32, 28 and 22 per cent, the same as before.

Recruits: A $5 a month boost to $80, instead of no increase.

Privates: $85 a month instead of $82.50.

Privates first class and corporals also probably will be given a greater increase.

The compromise bill still is incomplete, and these figures are entirely tentative and subject to change, it was said. When completed, the former GI opponents of the original bill will be asked to formally indorse it. Their approval is expected.

It is expected that the compromise measure will continue the wartime family allowances for the duration of current enlistments. Members of the service wives' committee on the pay bill are lining up support for their movement from other women's organizations.

Mrs. Baumer said that Mrs. Claude Dudley, president of the Army Daughters Association, had pledged the support of her group and will attend Wednesday's rally at the Capitol.

Members of the committee include: Mrs. Rodimon, chairman; Mrs. Baumer; Mrs. Margaret S. Sands, 5701 18th st., N. Arlington; Mrs. Carole Martineau, 1409 33d st. nw.; Mrs. Helen Stevenson Salsman, 4001 S. Cherry st., Falls Church, Va.; Miss Katherine Bristoe Knox, Chancery Apartments; Mrs. Charlotte Helen Vestergaard, McLean Gardens; Mrs. Mary Frances Smith, 4531 Walsh st., Bethseda, and Mrs. Fred G. Barnhorst, 5814 32d ave., Hyattsville.

Johnson Set To Ask Probe Of D. C. Guard

Secretary of Defense Johnson has decided to ask his new Civil Components Policy Board to study the status of the District National Guard and settle several current questions.

Aides said that no action will be taken toward the appointment of a new commanding general and adjutant general of the District Guard until a decision is made on these matters.

Inasmuch as the Civil Components Policy Board has been set up on paper but its members not yet appointed, Pentagon officials believe the District military posts will not be filled until sometime this summer. Therefore, they say, Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, whose retirement as Guard commander has been delayed pending the appointment of a successor, probably will take the local Guardsmen to camp this summer.

The questions Johnson wants decided before recommending a new Guard commander and adjutant general include:

1. Should the troop commander and adjutant general hold full time or part time jobs? General Cox now is on part time duty only, while Adjutant General Peyton G. Neavitt is on full time duty.

2. What rank should the posts carry? (Neavitt is a colonel.)

3. What should be the eligibility requirements for the posts? Besides military ability, should appointment be confined to members of the District Guard, or should they be open to officers of the Guard, Reserves or Regular Army generally.

4. Should the two posts be merged?

Under the directive setting up the new Civil Components Policy Board, it will develop over-all polices for the reserve branches of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps. The top-level group will consist of a civilian chairman, a military executive officer and six members from the departments of Army, Navy and Air Force.

On majority policy questions, Secretary Johnson must approve their findings. In other matters—including possibly the District Guard problems—the board will act for him.

Should any changes be made in eligibility requirements for the local Guard commander's post, it is expected that Johnson will reject the recommendation now before him as to a successor for General Cox and ask the Department of the Army for another nominee.

An Army board of three generals—Maj. Gen. Leo M. Kreber, National Guard; Maj. Gen. Willard G. Wyman, USA, and Brig. Gen. John P. McConnell, USAF—last winter picked a man for the job. The directive given them confined their choice to a National Guard colonel who resides in the Washington area and who is not in active service. It is understood they recommended Col. Leroy S. Mann, commander of the local 260th Coast Artillery.

Truman Joins Midshipmen in June Week

stepped over to congratulate Vaccaro with a hearty handshake. Then, accompanied by Admiral Holloway and members of the academy staff, all in white, he walked up Maryland ave. and across a shaded green lawn to the chapel steps.

Passes Tecumseh Figurehead

On the way he passed the ancient figurehead of Tecumseh, the midshipmen's "god of two-point-five" whose intercession they traditionally beg for passing grades before examinations.

At the chapel steps, Mr. Truman took position with the staff while the 791 members o the first class, commanded by Midshipman Dennis C. Stanfill of Shelbyville, Tenn., acting commander of the brigade of midshipmen, filed past on both sides and entered the building.

Inside, the class and the presidential party were joined by some 1700 relatives and friends of the graduating midshipmen. The colors were advanced while the midshipmen choir sang "Navy Blue and Gold." After the processional hymn, "The Son of Man Goes Forth to War," the colors were presented and the congregation joined in the Lord's Prayer.

After the stately hymn, "God of Our Fathers, Whose Almighty Hand," Chaplain Bishop delivered the baccalaureate sermon.

"During these four years now ending," he said, "you have come a long way together. You have inspired and encourage and helped each other. Out of these mutual toils, endeavors and experiences should come great things."

Clifford Accompanies Truman

After one verse of the National Anthem, Mr. Truman left the chapel and again stood on the steps while the first class marched out and formed in two ranks down the stretch of lawn over which he walked back to the landing. Before leaving, Admiral Holloway called young Stanfill over and presented him to the President who greeted him with a warm smile and a vigorous handshake.

Mr. Truman was accompanied to the services by Clark M. Clifford, his special counsel; Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, naval aide; Presidential Secretary William D. Hassett; Assistant Press Secretary Eben Ayers; Federal District Judge Richmond B. Keech of Washington, and George Schoeneman, Internal Revenue commissioner.

Among the party aboard the Williamsburg are Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's former Chief of Staff; Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, who joined the party yesterday, and Dr. John R. Steelman, assistant to the President.

Mr. Truman interrupted a Memorial weekend holiday cruise to be with the midshipmen today.

New Works Please At Festival Concert

By Richard Keith

The fifth and final concert of the sixth annual American Music Festival took place last evening at the National Gallery of Art. The program was made up of new orchestral compositions by American composers, performed by the National Gallery Orchestra under the direction of Richard Bales.

Included on the first half of the program were a spirited and clever Partita by Gardner Read; "Oriental Nocturne" by Bainbridge Crist; Divertimento for Strings by Jack F. Kilpatrick and Suite Brasileira by Radames Gnattali.

Pure Mood Music

The Nocturne would make very fine background music for a sinister Oriental movie; it is pure mood music. Jack Kilpatrick is one of those many new composers heavily influenced by the folk-music idiom. The musical ideas in his Divertimento are simple and few, but he has not stretched them out of their natural miniature stature and so has produced a neat little suite.

The Gnattali Suite is much the same type of composition, except that here we have Brazilian folk tunes and dances. There are spots that show a definite tendency toward French impressionist writing but most of the time, the typical South American rhythms and colors pervade.

Henriette Bagger-Plum, mezzo-soprano, opened the second half of the program with three "Songs From a Chinese Lute" by Frederick Woltmann. On first hearing, it is difficult to make a sound evaluation of these pieces. The orchestral writing is complex and somewhat disjointed and the orchestra had its difficulties keeping together. The words of the text, which might have been a big help to the listener were almost completely obscured. There are, however, moments when Woltmann produces some very entrancing effects.

Ward Piece Skillful

Robert Ward's "Night Music" is a skillfully written study of nocturnal moods, combining a rich harmonic background with wistful wanderings of the solo wind instruments. The "Three Pieces for a Concert" by Ray Green consist of a little march in triple time, a jazzy song and a pert finale.

The concert closed with Richard Bales' "Episodes From a Lincoln Ballet." Bales has written musical impressions on various happenings in the life of the Civil War President, employing, toward the end, the spoken voice. It is well-written, descriptive music, for it very definitely conveys to the hearer a vivid impression of Civil War days.

All the compositions performed last night were either first performances or first performances in Washington.

Shellville, Calif., May 29 (U.P.).—Grant H. Edwards, 43, former Air Force lieutenant colonel and Pacific war hero, shot and killed himself here yesterday because of despondency over his war wounds and separation from service.

A suicide note left in the mailbox of his uncle, James Miller, explained the motive for his act and directed searchers to his body.

"When they separated me from Army life they took everything from me. I loved it," he wrote.

Cross Roaders In 14th Summer

By Richard L. Coe

NOW COMES NEWS of the Cross Roads, that dogged little barn theater across the wet Potomac.

Irma Gordon, the Grover Whalen of Baileys Cross Roads, Va., announces this will be the red barn's fourteenth consecutive season and she's come up with a Holiday-magazine format for her plays.

They're all laid in vacation spots, says Miss Gordon, and the season will open with the liveliest vacation spot of them all, New York, the setting for F. Hugh Herbert's comedy, "For Love or Money."

Auditions for this and the four other plays will be held tomorrow night at the theater at Bailey's X-Roads, as the bus sign has it. If you're nterested in acting or production jobs for fun, drop over to see Miss Gordon from 7:30 on.

The Cross Roaders, in case you're vague about their status, are strictly local folk who put on plays for the fun of it. Their shows are usually fun on their modest level and folks go out for a good time, not for exceptional exhibitons of the draymatic arts, though they're capable enough as a general rule.

It's amusing to note that the all-Equity Olney will be doing the Cross Roaders opening comedy the week of August 23, with John Loder, ofthe origina cast, as the star. This happened once before when the Cross Roads did "The Hasty Heart" and was followed a couple of weeks later by Freddie Bartholomew playing the same comedy at Olney.

Second locale at Cross Roads will be a New England summer camp for "A Young Man's Fancy." The third will be the Middle West for Director Cecil Willis' manuscript comedy, "Thank You, Mr. Garrick." The year's mystery play is laid in the South, "Spooks," by Robert J. Sherman. Summer's last stop will be San Francisco for "Strange Bedfellows," that period political comedy.

With Miss Gordon as producer, Cecil Willis as director and Lowell Swortzell as stage manager, the Cross Roaders seem set for tomorrow night's public tryouts and interviews and that fourteenth summer.

THE MOUNTAIN THEATER, at Braddock Heights, Md., also has its 10-week professional season set. This theater, 5 miles west of Frederick on Route 40, will be playing Wednesday through Saturday nights, opening June 22 with "Parlor Story" . . . This is the tenth season for the Braddock Heights company and you'll be kept posted.

THE PALACE'S popular Angie Ratto, long dubbed "The Mayor of F Street," lived up to his unofficial title with a resounding one for Friday night's parade: "Chairman of the Parade and Special Events for the Opportunity Bond Drive and Metro Goldwyn Mayer's 25th Anniversary." . . . The job was as resounding as its mouth-breaking title.

ADD MORTON DOWNEY to the list of names coming for this weekend's Celebrities Golf Tournament. . . . The Irishman with the gift of song will be walking, golfing and singing his head off along with Bob, Bing and Art, the Godfrey.

THE AIRPORT DRIVE-IN will have a Police Boys' Benefit program Friday night, Arlington County's equivalent of the District's Police Boys Clubs. . . . WEAM will air the county's receipt and acceptance of second place for the National Safety Awards. . . . The Friday night feature will be "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

HOLIDAY matinees most everywhere today at neighborhoods which usually don't open till evenings.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Abe Burrows, the radio comic was in Lindy's yesterday listening to a discussion about some eminent New Yorkers. When the name of Herbert Bayard Swope was mentioned, and someone said he was smart, Burrows nodded knowingly and added: "He's brilliant. One of the most brilliant men in America" . . . "That's true," said another. "But how did you know it?" . . . "I knew it," said Burrows, "because the first fan-letter I ever got came from Swope."

The producers of "South Pacific" are considering Conrad Thibault for a second company . . . There are so many gambling and policy-slip cases waiting to be tried in Special Sessions that there'll be a Special Sessions this August . . . The Puerto Rican rum-makers are buying and will distribute 50,000 records of Noro Morales' "Rum & Soda" song . . . Gabriel Pascal has left for Hollywood for a major movie deal . . . Sidney Kingsley will go to London to direct the British company of "Detective Story" . . . Because the James Masons have no nurse for their 7-month-old daughter, they bring the child with them to parties, in a large bassinette in which they park her.

Charles Boyer was in the Stork Club and heard Leland Hayward tell of the first anniversary of "Mr. Roberts" when Hayward and Joshua Logan appeared in the show. Boyer told of appearing in a play written and directed by Henri Bernstein, who wanted to participate in the 200th performance. The playwright, wearing a prop beard, walked onstage and was dumbstruck—he couldn't utter or remember any of the words of his hit play. Bernstein stood there until his players ad libbed an exit line for him.

Sonja Henie sat in the Champagne Room at El Morocco, listening to the Viennese waltzes played by the piano-violin team of Andre Bodo and Karl Inwald. Miss Henie's escort placed his arm around her shoulder, while the violinist stood nearby playing Lehar's romantic tunes . . . "We're leaving," Miss Henie suddenly announced to her escort. "After 2 a. m. a violin can become a dangerous instrument."

One of the race tracks installed a $2 window in the press box, so that the newspapermen wouldn't have to leave their box to make bets. This $2 window showed the highest percentage of profit at the track, the first week.

Mate Slays Singer As Crowd Watches

Mrs. Rhoda

Rhoda

Atlantic City, N. J., May 29 (U.P.). David J. Rhoda, 43-year-old truck driver, was charged with murder today in the shooting of his estranged wife, a nightclub singer, as she knelt on a street corner and begged for mercy.

The slaying occurred last night before scores of horrified vacationers outside a tavern where Rhoda's wife, Geraldine, 24, had just completed her act.

More than 50 passersby stood spellbound as Rhoda drew a revolver after an argument and waved it wildly at his terrified wife.

The red-haired singer, mother of a 2-year-old daughter, fell to her knees, screaming for mercy, and began frantically to crawl away.

She moved less than four feet when a bullet spun her around and she fell flat on her face. A second bullet struck her in the back.

Mrs. Rhoda, billed in boardwalk night spots as "Rusty," died in a hospital as surgeons prepared to operate.

Pastors Assail Slot Machines

Mr. Stettler expressed the belief that if the church people turn out for the vote, the proposal to legalize the slot machines will not pass.

The Rev. Keith Custis, pastor of Riverdale Presbyterian Church, urged his congregation to vote in the referendum during the service, and also called attention to the measure in the church bulletin. He said the church news letter, which will be distributed Tuesday, will also mention the referendum and reach those who were not present yesterday.

At Hyattsville Presbyterian Church, the Rev. D. Hobart Evans also stressed the need for church people to vote in the referendum. He pointed out that "no matter how much sentiment is expressed against the bill, only votes will be counted."

Antigambling leaflets were passed out at First Methodist Church, Hyattsville, where the Rev. Edgar Wells Beckett told his congregation that gambling has become a Nation-wide racket. At Hyattsville Baptist Church the Rev. Henry R. Osgood also urged his congregation to vote against legalization of the slot machines. Leaflets were distributed at the church last Sunday, Mr. Osgood said.

County Decision

Slot Machine Referendum This Week

Princee Georges County residents will cast ballots from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. Thursday in the county's slot machine referendum.

Hours for the voting and the voting places have been announced by the county board of supervisors of elections.

The issue is whether to legalize cash payoffs for electrically operated console type machines and for pinball machines.

Under the bill, the conventional "one-armed bandits" would be outlawed.

114-Year-Old Bible Recovered After Theft

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—A 114-year-old Bible, used since 1886 by the Knights of Pythias and stolen Friday, was recovered today by police.

It was stolen from Melvin Ewen, Minneapolis, Minn., supreme secretary of the Knights of Pythias, while he was changing trains.

The Bible was recovered today in a hotel, where a clerk said it was left in a room by a transient guest.

Women Fliers to Race

South Korean Minister Indicted for 'Bribes'

Seoul, Korea, May 29 (U.P.).—The Seoul district prosecutor's office today formally indicted Miss Louise Yim, South Korean Minister of Commerce and Industry, for alleged acceptance of bribes and other "irregularities" in the performance of her official duties.

The indictment is the result of a two-month probe by a special investigation commission into alleged irregularities on the part of government officials.

Liberals Score In Newfoundland

St. John's, Newfoundland, May 29 (U.P.).—The Liberal Party scored a surprising victory over the Conservatives in this island's first election since confederation with Canada, incomplete returns showed today.

Interim Premier Joseph Smallwood seemed assured of forming Newfoundland's first provincial government, on the basis of election reports from 19 of the 27 Legislature seats contested. Conservative Leader Harry Mews conceded the Liberal victory at midnight.

When the counting was halted until Monday, the Liberals had elected nine members, seemed certain of two more seats, and held commanding leads in two other contests. One Conservative had been chosen, four held strong leads, and one Independent had been named.

The returns not yet in were from outposts considered to be Liberal Party strongholds, and political experts said final returns would show a Liberal Party landslide.

Sydney Rutledge Says She'll Stand by Spouse

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 29 (U.P.). Sydney Rutledge, 23, who bared the details of her bourbon-fogged seduction in an unsuccessful attempt to save her husband from a murder conviction, said today she will stand by him. Then she left town for her parents' home at Hannibal, Mo., without visiting him in his jail cell.

She will respect the judgment of her husband, who has said "I never want her to see me in jail," her father said.

The willowy, 6-foot blonde said she still believes her husband is innocent, and that "everything will come out all right."

A jury of nine men and three women last night found Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, 28, St. Louis, guilty of second degree murder in the slaying of Byron C. Hattman, 29, in a hotel room here last December 14.

The conviction carries a penalty of 10 years to life in prison, but sentence was not passed immediately and defense attorneys said they would appeal.

Miner Slays Mother-in-Law, Then Himself

Oakland, Md., May 29 (AP).—"Here's a present for you, Mom," Andrew J. Wolfe told his mother-in-law today—then he shot her to death and killed himself.

Wolfe, a 45-year-old unemployed miner, forced his way into the apartment of Mrs. Bertha Platter, his wife's 68-year-old mother, police reported. With his wife, Beulah, and a granddaughter in the room, he fired two shots from a .32-caliber War World II souvenir pistol at Mrs. Platter. One slug struck the woman in the chest and another lodged in her abdomen.

While the terrified witnesses fled from the apartment, Wolfe pointed the weapon above his right eye and pulled the trigger again.

Bottle Separates Blind Man, Dog He Vowed to Treat Right

Atlanta, Ga., May 29 (U.P.).—A blind beggar's promise to quit drinking and take better care of his seeing-eye dog was drowned today in a bottle of cheap whisky.

Last Wednesday W. C. Knight made a solemn vow to renounce the bottle if City Court would return Big Boy, his German shepherd dog.

The police had parted the 34-year-old beggar and his guide after learning the animal was half-starved.

Big Boy was returned amidst a shower of $10 bills to provide food for the skinny, listless animal and a hotel room for his master.

Today Knight sat forlorn in a cell separated, perhaps permanently, from Big Boy. The charge read "Public drunkenness."

"Really Loaded"

Big Boy's master was arrested last night. He "was really loaded."

Big Boy didn't protest, but allowed himself to be led to the police station kennel, soulful-eyed and wary. He didn't bark or snap as he did on his last trip.

This morning Marshall E. Lind, manager of the Humane Society, took Big Boy to the society's kennel for a big "horse meat steak," telling Knight, "I doubt that you'll get him back this time."

Lind said "he was sober enough to beg me not to let the police take Big Boy away from him."

Carolinian Offers Help

The police station is receiving calls from sympathetic persons. One offer came from J. W. Ferrell, Winston-Salem, N. C., businessman, who asked permission to finance a stay in a sanatorium for Knight.

"Let's send him to some institution where he can be treated and built up physically, mentally and spiritually so he will know how to care for Big Boy," Ferrell wired.

"I will give $50 to help do this or more if necessary and any amount in addition to this that you do not raise in Atlanta for his stay in a sanatorium."

Ferrell said he will start a fund-raising drive among his friends in Winston-Salem and have the money in Atlanta Tuesday.

What's the Verdict

JOINT TENANCY

Q. After a few months of unhappy marriage, a husband and wife agreed that she should get a divorce. In due course, notice was served on the husband by the court that divorce action against him had been filed. He did not contest. He married another woman, and together they acquired real estate, deeded to them as joint tenants. After her death, it was learned by the second wife's relatives that the man's first wife never had completed the divorce action. They now contend that they are entitled to the second wife's share in the real estate. Are they correct?

A. Join tenancy of real estate provides that the last one alive of the joint tenants gets sole title to the property. Joint tenancy is not limited to husband and wives. Thus, even though the man and the second woman were not married, even though they thought they were, they could, and did, hold the property as joint tenants and the survivor (in this case the man) succeeded to the sole ownership. The second woman's relatives have no claim in the absence of fraud. The situation does illustrate, however, that mere notice of divorce action should not be regarded as necessarily resulting in a decree.—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

Ford Strike End

After more than three weeks of intermittent sparring, representatives of the striking Ford workers and the company have agreed to submit their dispute over the speed-up issue to arbitration. Meantime about a hundred thousand employes, the great majority of whom were not directly affected by the alleged speed-up, have lost millions of dollars in wages, while the company, too, has suffered heavy losses.

The futility of trying to settle disputes of this kind by a tug-of-war is emphasized by the failure of direct negotiations carried on in an atmosphere of hostility to produce an agreement. The company, to be sure, urged submission of the dispute to arbitration at the beginning, but on terms unacceptable to the union, which insisted on direct negotiations. As might have been expected, it was impossible to reach an agreement by such means, since the company maintained that changes in its production schedules to make up for time lost by accident and other emergencies did not result in overwork, while the union clung just as steadfastly to its charge that assembly line speed-ups endangered the health and safety of workers. Obviously the only satisfactory solution of the issue lay in submission of the disputed issue to impartial expert decision.

After both sides had spent a deal of precious time in bargaining maneuvers the union made a conditional offer to arbitrate the dispute that led to more heated discussion over the phrasing of the question to be submitted and the method of selecting an arbitrator or arbitrators. The net result is an agreement on arbitration terms that enables the Ford workers to go back to their jobs although the issues in dispute are still unsettled. All the preliminary strife has been a needless waste of time, money and effort. If adequate machinery for handling a dispute of this character involving questions of fact and issues calling for expert examination had already been set up, it might have been settled peacefully without interruption of work or loss of a single day's wages by any Ford employe. That is the moral of the Ford strike.

All In One

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee plans to put all appropriation items next year into a single omnibus bill that would give Congress an overall view of the spending program. His proposal has bipartisan support within the committee and is hailed by Senator Taft as a "step in the the right direction." Senator Byrd has long advocated the use of a single appropriation bill of this kind, pointing out that the practice of passing separate appropriation bills over a period of several months is a legislative handicap that prevents Congress from considering the budget as a whole and making intelligent reductions in expenditures.

The Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 attempted to put a ceiling on spending in advance of detailed appropriation requests. But the proposed legislative budget has never been put into effect. To estimate total expenditures early in the session before spending plans were fully known proved an impossible task. Moreover, the Budget Committee did not have a staff equipped to do the work entailed in studying and revising budget estimates. The present Congress decided to defer the date for agreement on the legislative budget to May 1 and ended by doing nothing at all about it. The failure of this effort to establish some sort of comprehensive control over fiscal policy adds to the feeling of frustration that overwhelms many Congressmen who believe that Government spending must be curtailed, but lack the information needed to reduce expenditures without impairing essential services. Consequently, there is growing support for the type of omnibus bill that Mr. Cannon is proposing.

Opponents of the plan fear that it might result in undue delay in passing appropriation measures. But if both House and Senate held hearings on spending proposals concurrently the Senate would be ready to act promptly on the final measure approved by the House. Another objection to the plan is that it would bar the President from exercising his right to veto appropriation measures, since the veto of an omnibus bill would leave the Government without any funds for carrying on operations. However, the exercise of the veto power in case of appropriation bills always creates grave disturbances and is seldom resorted to. If the President ventured to veto an unacceptable omnibus bill, the very gravity of the resultant emergency would doubtless insure prompt remedial action.

In our opinion the need for a control measure of this kind has been convincingly demonstrated. Improved machinery for control of expenditures will not, as the recent CED report on Tax and Expenditure Policy says, assure wise congressional action. But without such machinery Congress cannot be expected to act wisely. An omnibus appropriation bill is, of course, only one means of giving Congress a better insight into fiscal problems. Budget and accounting reforms, such as those recommended by the Hoover Commission, are also imperative if legislators are to know what specific spending projects will actually cost in any given year and in succeeding years.

Campaign Funds

Congressional concern over the political associations of Louis Johnson before he became Secretary of Defense have led to revival of the suggestion that political campaigns be financed by the taxpayers. The present practice of allowing each political party to solicit funds from men who are likely to be applicants for governmental favors certainly creates some serious problems. Even when the individuals concerned act with complete integrity and fairness, the fact that large contributions have been made arouses suspicions that cannot be easily dispelled. One must beware, however, of jumping out of the frying pan into the fire.

In Mr. Johnson's case the difficulty arises, of course, from naming to this key position in the Government's defense program a man who was the chief money-raiser for the Democratic Party in the 1948 campaign. As we have previously noted, one of the large contributors to that political war chest was his business associate, Floyd Odlum, chairman of the Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp., which manufactures the B-36 bomber. Obviously it would be outrageous to assume, without facts, that political influence has been or will be used in behalf of the B-36. Yet the case does sharply illustrate the dilemmas in which public officials are likely to find themselves when, as party workers, they have accepted contributions from businessmen, labor organizations or other groups that are likely to seek favors from the Government.

The easiest way of avoiding the dilemma is not to ask men who are likely to be called upon to take key Government jobs, such as Secretary of Defense, to manage party fund-raising campaigns. Scrupulous adherence to the highest ethics of public office would make fund-raising chieftains ineligible for positions in which it would be possible for them to repay political favors with Government contracts. If that high standard is not maintained by the President in making appointments, he must expect the activities of his official family to be scrutinized with extraordinary care by Congress.

The basic difficulty cannot be corrected, as some commentators have suggested, by having Congress appropriate funds for campaign expenses. Three years ago when this issue arose, The Post pointed out, that if Congress should forbid the giving and spending of private funds for campaign purposes, those funds would be spent in behalf of candidates without ever reaching the candidate himself or any committee in his behalf. Congress has repeatedly tried to limit the sums that may be spent in political campaigns. Every effort of this sort has proved ineffectual. Organizations forbidden to make campaigns contributions have simply set up campaign units of their own. Of course, they would continue to do so if each candidate had a campaign grant from the Government. It is no more feasible in a free country to prevent people from spending money to foster their political beliefs than it is to prevent them from talking.

One other great difficulty, of course, would arise in determining what candidates were eligible for campaign expenses from Congress. With such manna from Washington, every politician in the land would try to run for office. Nor would it be feasible to limit campaign expenses to the regular nominees of parties. That would discriminate against the South, where the chief political contests are within one party. What is perhaps even more serious, such grants would encourage a splintering of parties to take advantage of the free campaign money and thus break down our two-party system. Congress is not likely to embark upon any such futile experiment, but it will have to maintain extraordinary vigilance as long as our system makes it possible to place active party fund-raisers into positions from which payoffs could be made.

Open The Door

Many of the old arguments against statehood for Hawaii and Alaska have gone into the discard. Opponents who used to talk of the inadvisability of making Alaska a State because it had fewer than 50,000 "white" inhabitants have abandoned the argument. It couldn't stand up against the fact that Minnesota came in 100 years ago when its population was less than 7000. Likewise the opposition on grounds of noncontiguity has vanished before the facts. Communication and transportation to Hawaii and Alaska is now more rapid than on the continent a few years ago.

The arguments advanced today are political—partly partisan and partly ideological. This is especially true with respect to Hawaii. It is said to be a hotbed of communism. This, of course, is an exaggeration that serves to conceal a real fact. Hawaii is a living demonstration of racial democracy at work, and the delegation it would send to Congress would have something worth saying about civil rights. To be sure, there are some Communists in Hawaii, and the denial of statehood puts into their hands an excellent weapon for recruiting more. The same is true in other reaches of the Pacific, where non-Caucasian peoples are watching how earnestly the United States lives up to the democratic ideal of equality.

In their opposition to the statehood bills the Dixiecrats have the silent partnership of Speaker Rayburn and Representative Sabath, both of whom ought to know better. Neither partisan spite nor the specter of economic feudalism—if that is Mr. Sabath's stumbling block—ought to obstruct the movement for statehood for Hawaii any more than racism in disguise should stand in the way of Alaskan statehood. Both bills ought to be reported out by the Rules Committee without any more delay.

Robert L. Ripley

The career of Robert Leroy Ripley, who died rather unexpectedly in New York last Friday, seems in its way quite as fantastic as any of those aberrations of nature to which he owed his world-wide celebrity and his wealth. It began, however, like the conventional American success story, under circumstances of severe poverty. His father died when Ripley was a small boy and he was obliged to leave school at an early age to help support his family by whatever small jobs he could pick up. These included work for a local stonecutter in his native town of Santa Rosa, pitching for semiprofessional baseball clubs, and the occasional sale of a line sketch to some humorous magazine. He had already shown a good deal of aptitude for drawing but was apparently quite without instruction.

As a ballplayer, however, he evinced even more promise and so came to the notice of a scout for the New York Giants. In the winter of 1917 he was instructed to report to the training camp at Marlin, Tex.; but there in a practice game his pitching arm was broken by a line drive. This was one of two accidents that opened to him the gates of a great success. The other occurred in the following year, after Ripley had become a sports cartoonist for the New York Evening Globe. On a dull day, after the end of the football season, he found himself unable to think of any subject for his picture. In a kind of desperation he gathered together out of his memory and from the files a few freakish incidents of sports and presented them under the caption Believe It or Not. The response from the readers of the Globe was immediate and astonishing. They demanded more such curiosities, and many of them called attention to even stranger incidents.

Thus Believe It or Not became a regular department of the Globe and presently was being syndicated to several dozen newspapers. In 1928, a selection of the cartoons was published by Messrs. Simon and Schuster. The book had an instant and tremendous popularity, duplicating, if not surpassing, that of the Crossword Puzzles. Ripley's fortune was made. His annual income went into six figures. He signed contracts to make movies and radio programs. He began to travel all over the world in search of materials. He employed a great staff of research workers to uncover new wonders and to verify those selected from his mountainous correspondence as worthy of his notice. He was awarded honorary degrees and fellowships in learned societies.

The impressive thing about the Ripley cartoons was a kind of terrifying irrelevance—an eggplant grown in the semblance of human face, hybrid descendants of zebras and jackasses, African lily pads capable of sustaining the weight of a full-grown man, noble eccentrics who used authentic Titian canvases as lining for topcoats, men of genius whose genealogies contained vast numbers of lunatic ancestors, insectivorous plants, optical illusions drawn without lifting the pen, mathematical anomalies, unusual signs and epitaphs, and so on, day after day, year in and year out. Nothing was related to anything else, and it is doubtful whether any of Ripley's millions of admirers could state, after a lapse of 24 hours, what prodigies he had offered them on the previous day, so difficult was it to anchor them in the mind.

In short, Believe It or Not, and the innumerable and inevitable imitations of it that sprang up on all sides, seemed to many a perfect representation of our schizophrenic universe, in which the only principle is apparently that of disassociation.

Bail To Aid Escape

As an interesting postlude to the Eisler case, the so-called Civil Rights Congress has announced a Nation-wide campaign for funds to repay the men who put up the $23,000 bail that enabled Eisler to escape. The Civil Rights Congress acted as guarantor of the bail, but its current statement makes it perfectly clear that it did so with the object of enabling the convicted Communist leader to escape. Now that its purpose has been accomplished, it goes out to solicit funds from the public on the ground that Eisler's escape is a notable contribution to the Commie cause.

The least the courts can do is to take note in future cases of how this system works. Bail is intended to insure the presence of the prisoner when and if the time for his commitment to prison arrives. Obviously bail furnished to a convicted alien Communist leader by Communist Party members or fellow travelers, relying upon funds solicited from the public, serves precisely the opposite purpose. The courts will have to recognize this fact in the future if the systematic defeat of justice in such cases is to be avoided.

Forrestal and Pearson

In defense of Drew Pearson, though I am sure justice has already provided a much more adequate defense, I still prefer to take to task Mr. B. W. Randle and Mr. John Nealon (letters published May 26).

Upon what grounds does Mr. Randle assume to speak for the majority of Washington Post readers? As regards Mr. Nealon, I cannot share his interpretation of Mr. Pearson. "or" just why anyone should devote his life to being a servant of brotherhood.

In living with the times, where life is but perpetual conflict, the victories of justice depending upon how much strength it can muster, one must necessarily apply Machiavellian principles as a bulwark for a sensitive soul against the rottenness of the world in general. Mr. Forrestal died by his own hand and none other. There are those who are glad he is dead and there are those who are sorry.

When a man works in his own interest or the interest of others he must necessarily work against the interest of some. A man who seeks public life must for his own protection arrange himself mentally for defeats and success, acclaims and criticism. Failing to do this he has taken the first step toward self-destruction.

May I express the thought that you had no right, moral or otherwise, to publish the unctious editorial that appeared in your paper (May 23) on the day following Secretary Forrestal's death, after having given such wide circulation to the Pearson poison in the Washington area.

"Limited Preference"

Regarding your May 24 editorial "Limited Preference," why do you and others always assume that veterans are below nonveterans in competence? I resent it and I'm sure there are thousands of others who also resent the implication.

Since earliest times the Government has attempted to give the vets some benefits. Preference has been allowed the vets under the act of 1944 and the nonvets have been trying to undermine it ever since. It is merely an equalizer—giving the vet a chance to regain a little of his opportunities lost during the war.

You state that "a Government staffed by people whose primary qualification is not competence but war service is headed for chaos." I agree. Are you implying that all non-vets are competent?

Alabama Schools

Roscoe R. Nix (letter published May 21) has taken Drew Pearson to task because he is afraid that Mr. Pearson's broadcast, and his column, may have given the impression that all of Alabama is "out of the woods" insofar as school facilities for white and colored are concerned. Actually, I would be quite willing to bet that there are many white schools in Alabama that are quite unfit for use as schools. We want, all of us, to see our children have good schools and good teachers, but after all it takes hard cash money to do these things and there are many communities that do not always have the cash. And these communities are not confined to Alabama, or to any other Southern State.

Attacks On Lilienthal

I hope that many citizens are as indignant as I am when they note the clamor and howling of the wolves in the form of certain members of Congress. Those men accuse Mr. Lilienthal of incompetence before they know little more than I do about the facts in the recent events in the Atomic Energy Commission.

They are really after Mr. Lilienthal's neck. It would be interesting to know the true reasons behind their desires to get him fired. If Mr. Lilienthal gets fired for incompetence I wonder how many members of Congress would be fired for trifling, bumbling incompetence if we only had the power to probe into their accomplishments.

Washington Slums

Whatever the tourists who visit Washington and see the many beautiful buildings and parks may feel, for those who know something of the housing and living conditions in some parts of the city, it is sad and depressing to think how small a part of the cost of the art galleries and cathedrals and Jefferson Memorials built in late years would have been sufficient to eliminate the slums and alleys and to provide housing for the people who have had to live in such places and still do.

It would be subsidized housing, no doubt, but that is hardly a new thing, and it is no worse to have subsidized housing for people who cannot afford decent housing than it is to subsidize airlines with mail contracts or manufacturers with high tariffs.

The alleys of Washington have been in existence for many years. I have seen letters written by members of my own family who were in Washington before the Civil War which told of much the same conditions as were described in the newspapers a few weeks ago in the alleys back of the Capitol. Nearly a hundred years seems a long time to wait for such things to be remedied.

Middle-Income Housing

Herblock hit the bull's-eye with his May 23 cartoon indicating the plight of the neglected middle-income family.

In support of his views and, I hope, those of The Washington Post, I should like to identify the middle-income family as seen by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, describe its problem, and outline a possible solution.

The Bureau of the Census tells us that the median income of the 25-34 age group is $2449 while that of the 35-44 age group is $2845. Applying the common rule of thumb, 2½ times annual income, these groups can afford, respectively, homes costing $6122.50 and $7112.50. But where can a man with a wife and two children find a suitable home today for $7112.50?

Actually, it is difficult if not impossible to find a suitable two-bedroom home for $10,000, especially in the North where sturdier construction is required. However, for the purpose of argument, let us assume that suitable $10,000 homes are available. If we apply the same common rule, 2½ times annual income, we find that the home buyer must have an income of $4000 to purchase a $10,000 home. Again, figures published by Census indicate that only 12.4 per cent of the 25-34 age group has an income of $4000 or above. In the 35-44 age group 22.2 per cent have an income of $4000 or above.

This means that in the younger age group 87.6 per cent of our male citizens, veterans and nonveterans, cannot afford a $10,000 house. In the older age group 77.8 per cent of our male citizens, veterans and nonveterans, cannot afford a $10,000 house. This, in actual numbers, means that 17,038,000 male individuals between the ages of 25 and 44 have incomes of less than $4000 and therefore cannot purchase a house costing $10,000 without overreaching themselves financially.

Of course, some of these people will be eligible for public housing. The Public Housing Administration quotes its average maximum income limit for a typical family (2 adults and 2 children) as $1947. If we eliminate from these particular age groups those persons eligible for public housing by reason of earning $1947 or less per year, we eliminate 33.3 per cent of the 25-34 age group and 26.4 per cent of the 35-44 age group, or a total in numbers of 6,167,000.

When the number representing people eligible for public housing is deducted from the number representing persons making $4000 or less we have then outlined our real middle-income group numbering 10,863,000. This figure represents the number of male persons between the ages of 25 and 44 who cannot qualify for public housing because their income is too high and cannot afford a $10,000 home because their income is too low.

After exhaustive study I have been drawn to the conclusion that any program designed to aid this important middle-income group must do several things.

First, it must cut costs by mass purchase of land (undeveloped if necessary); mass purchase of materials; reducing labor cost through mass production; eliminating profits of developer, builder, promoter, etc.; reducing financing charges; extending period of loan amortization.

The only vehicle by which all of the above requirements may be accomplished is the nonprofit cooperative or corporation authorized to borrow money directly from the Federal Government at low interest with an extended period of amortization. We visualize an interest rate at the average cost of money to the Federal Government plus ½ of 1 per cent (to cover administrative cost of program) amortized over a period equal to the expected life of the building (not to exceed 60 years).

It must be emphasized that this is not a subsidized program. It can and will pay its own way just as existing FHA programs do. These and other features are contained in H.R. 4458, drafted and supported by the VFW, the AFL, the CIO, and many other public interest groups. It has been introduced by Representative Hugh D. Mitchell and 14 other members of the House of Representatives and it is to be hoped that H.R. 4458 will receive the attention it deserves.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

What Is Left

CANTON.—In the present situation in China, it is first important to realize that the National government's resistance to the Comunists is virtually at an end. Second, however, it is also important to realize that in this still semifuedal country, major local centers of resistance to the Comunists will survive long after the last plump Kuomintang official has skedaddled for his life.

The geographical location of these local resistance centers is of the utmost strategic interest to the United States. First, of course, is the island stronghold which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has already prepared for himself on Formosa.

AS HAS BEEN previously pointed out in this space, it is vital to safeguard Formosa, which is the key to our own Japan-Okinawa-Philippine defense line in the Pacific. Then besides Formosa, the other Chinese resistance centers may be catalogued as follows:

1. Kwangsi Province lies west of Canton astride the Canton-Hankow railroad. For decades, it has been the domain of acting President Le Tsung-jen and his partner, the able Gen. Pai-Chung-hsi. Thence Li and Pai sallied forth, with a huge armed retinue, to camp in Nanking until they had persuaded Chiang Kai-shek to declare war on Japan. Thence Pai led the Kwangsi armies into the national struggle. And thence Li and Pai have now returned. Pai has already moved his main headquarters back to the province. It is rugged country. The troops are good fighters. The people are loyal to their leaders. This will be a hard nut for the Communists to crack.

2. The province of Yunnan, which has the great wartime air force base of Kunming for its capital, is strategically the most important area of the Chinese mainland. It shares borders with, and commands the Chinese approaches into, both Indo-China and Burma. If Yunnan falls into Communists hands, the Chinese Communists can link up with their Indo-Chinese and Burman brethren.

No Chinese province is more backward or complex than Yunnan. The strongest man is still the former governor, old Lung Yun, the immensely rich old rebel who was arrested four years ago by the Generalissimo, then secretly rescued by Maj. Gen. C. L. Chennault from Nanking. But Lung has not reestablished his home power. His brother-in-law, General Lu Han, the official ruler of Yunnan, has retired in defeat to his Kunming palace. The province is ravaged by bandits, who are partly inspired by the Communists. The place has, indeed, only one defense.

Geography makes Yunnan almost impregnable. It is an immensely high plateau, pitted with rich valleys, bristling with high mountains. There are only two feasible routes of attack—an appalling road from the north and an even more dreadful road from the east. Only a few divisions can hold Yunnan—if a few divisions can be got together.

3. The Province of Szechuan, above the Yangtze gorges, was the old fortress against the Japanese. Its immense agricultural wealth derives from the great Chengtu plain, still watered by the irrigation works built by the first universal Emperor in the third century B. C. Its 60 million inhabitants make this mere province a nation within a nation. And it can be reached only through grim mountains from the north, or up the terrible Yangtze gorges from the east.

Here again, the power is atomized. The former Governor, and former Prime Minister of China, Chang Chun, is an important figure. So is the great landowner, Liu Wen-hui. There are several others. There are also considerable numbers of Szechuanese troops, owing various allegiances. The defense of Szechuan will be inexpensive, as Chiang Kai-shek proved at Chungking. But the question really is whether any defense will be organized.

4. Last but not least are the northwest provinces, infinitely remote, fantastically rugged and dominated by a tough, hard-fighting Moslem minority. The northwestern Chinese Moslems are in turn dominated by the Ma Clan, who have about 80,000 men under arms and assert they could put another 200,000 in the field if they had the equipment. Even with their 80,000, the Mas have already cut the Communist armies to ribbons in five successive engagements. They say they will never surrender, and there is better reason to believe them than most of the southern warlords who make the same claim.

THIS ABOUT COMPLETES the list. Possibly the Communists will mop up these pockets of resistance one by one. On the other hand, it is also possible that Chinese feudal leaders will defend their lairs for a long time. And it is certainly in the immediate American interest—the hard, practical American interest—that this time should be as long as possible.

Democratic Theater

The performance of Medea at the Sylvan Theater recalled the memorable words of the then Secretary of Interior at the Marian Anderson concert before the Lincoln Memorial, "Under the open sky, we are all free."

Negro and Nordic sat side by side at the Sylvan Theater, and there were no untoward incidents. When will Washington put a roof over democracy's head?

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Cruelty Of Ignorance

THE CRUELTY of our public controversies, which has become so virulent, is, I venture to think, a certain symptom that the issues at stake are not understood and that then the problem is insoluble. There are no doubt always some who enjoy cruelty for its own sake, sadists who, possessing briefly a little power or influence, feel they are bigger and better men when they can make someone else suffer.

LIPPMANN

But they would be negligible and easily taken care of were it not for the much greater number who, frightened by issues that they have not understood and by problems they do not know how to solve, adopt readily the primitive view that somewhere there must be a villain and a conspiracy behind their own bewilderment.

THE PRIMITIVE solution of a conflict is not to explain it and resolve it. The primitive solution is to destroy the man who does not think as you do, and to destroy him with a swelling conviction of righteousness and patriotism, all the more impervious to reason and charity, the more ignorant you are.

Yet the great controversies are almost never, perhaps never, melodramas in which the hero and the villain are unmistakably the champions of good versus evil. It is the essence and hallmark of really great controversies that somewhere at the bottom of them there is a conflict at least of good intentions, of men, however mistaken, who believe they are right. They are not like the conflict between the policemen and the sneak thief. The great and difficult controversies are precisely those in which there is something, and often much, to be said on both sides.

THAT IS what makes them great. That is what makes them difficult. And controversies of that magnitude are never resolved and concluded unless men arise who will look for solutions based not on the errors and evils of one side or the other but on whatever truth and virtue can be discerned in both sides. This is the principle of magnanimity in public life. When it is lacking, debate degenerates into the brawling of angry, blind, and self-righteous fools.

JAMES FORRESTAL was the storm center of a very great controversy: one which, as he knew more poignantly than anyone else, transcended all the questions of money and economy, of unification, priority and precedence. The controversy turns upon the organization of American power in a time when the responsibility of this country is unique. He knew what the decisions he was called upon to make implied. He knew it profoundly because he had played a commanding role in developing the Navy for the most brilliant naval war in modern history. His experience then had made him realize, as few others could have realized, what an awful difference it would have made, in 1944-45 if the wrong decisions had been made in 1941-42.

The decisions he was asked to make in 1947-48 were even more difficult than those in which he had participated in 1941-42. I think in the form in which they were presented to him, they were decisions which only an ignorant and irresponsible man would have made. For when he was called upon to "unify" the Navy, the Army, and the Air Force, he knew that in fact he was being asked to disunify the Navy and the Army. That was the decision he could not bring himself to make—to break up the proven unity of all arms—ships, planes, Marines—which actually existed in the Navy, to break up the unity of the ground forces and tactical aviation, which actually existed in the Army—in order to bring about a theoretical unification of these services each with a monopoly of one kind of military power.

THE RESISTANCE of the two older services—stronger in the Navy though present also in the Army—to unification of this kind cannot be disposed of by the primitive argument that it is the work of stuffy, reactionary, and ambitious graduates of Annapolis and West Point. The Navy has served this country too long and too well to be treated as the bad boy, even the villain, of the dispute. Nor can the dispute ever be settled rightly—and this is what Forrestal, who was a Navy man, knew—by decisions which leave the Navy overridden and disrupted.

The issues of the controversy, as they have been defined and crystallized in the debate, are, I believe, insoluble. And so the question arises whether a fresh look, a fresh start, and a new formulation might not permit us to reach the broad objectives on which we are in principle agreed.

MIGHT WE not at least examine the idea that instead of unifying the three services by giving each the monopoly of a weapon, we might do better to determine their responsibility for security and defense in different parts of the world? To put it crudely—but I hope without dogmatism—might we not recognize that in the Pacific and the Far East, the primary service is the Navy, that for Europe the primary services are the Air Force and the Army?

A reorganization based on that distinction would mean that for war in the Pacific all arms would be integrated around sea power. For war in Europe they would be integrated around the combination of air and land power. That would dispose of the theoretical but dangerous issue as to whether sailors should fly planes and have troops (namely the Marines) and whether the Navy's army should have aviation (Marine Corps aviation), and who should own the atomic bomb.

UNIFICATION in the Pacific would then be what it was during the war—unification not around a blueprint but around a strategical mission—the conduct of a war in a theater where the ocean is the controlling element. Unification in Europe would be developed in relation to the real situation, namely that while all arms would be involved, ships and ground forces would be auxiliary to air power.

The radical novelty of this approach is, I realize, an objection to it, and it would present all kinds of practical problems—particularly how to determine the assignment of strategic reserves between the two main theaters. But novel and different it is, at least one can say for it that in case of war, the supreme command in the Pacific would have to go to the Navy, and in Europe to the Air Force and Army. Should those who will command not have the decision as to what weapons they need in order to fight?

Might it, therefore, not be the part of wisdom to organize our preparation on that principle?

Ford Strike Settled . . .

arrangement will decide by June 7 at the latest who will arbitrate the speed-up issue.

Ford said it would resume production in its 33 manufacturing and assembly plants "as rapidly as possible."

Maintenance crews will enter the Idle River Rouge plants Monday night to start the huge plant, key to Ford's industrial empire, humming again.

Ford said full operations across the Nation could start in about two weeks.

Haggling over selection of an arbitrator stretched out negotiations unexpectedly. Finally, a compromise, which probably will mean arbitration by a three-member board, broke the deadlock.

The step-by-step selection of an arbitrator calls for a three-man team from each side to attempt to name an arbitrator before 5 p. m. Thursday. Failing that, each side will pick one member of a three-man arbitrating panel.

The two chosen arbitrators then will attempt to agree on a third member before 5 p. m. June 7. If no agreement is reached Dr. Harry Shulman, the regular Ford-UAW umpire, will become the third member.

No time limit was placed on the arbitration decision. The company and union agreed it would be final and binding.

Holy Names Academy Has 42 Graduates

Forty-two girls were graduated from the Academy of the Holy Names yesterday afternoon in ceremonies at St. Gabriel's Church.

Garbed in white cap and gown, and carrying bouquets of red roses, each graduate of the Silver Spring school marched singly into the church. And singly, each approached the altar, knelt, and received her diploma.

In the addresses which followed, they were told that real success in the years before them will not be measured in terms of worldly accomplishment.

"Real success," said Father Thomas Cantwell, OMI, the speaker, "is an unswerving loyalty and devotion to Jesus and Mary . . ."

Father Cantwell told them, and hundreds of parents and friends who packed the church, that their graduation was not en end but a beginning.

"Today marks the end of your high school days," he said. "It does not mark the end of your learning . . . wherever you are you will be studying and you will be learning."

The priest praised the girls' parents for making it possible for them to have attended the academy, and the work of the sisters who taught and led them through their four years of high school there.

Names of the graduates were called by the Rev. Aloysius O'Connor, of St. Michael's Church. The Rev. Joseph Deppe, pastor of St. Michael's, presented the diplomas. Assisting him were the Rev. John B. Roeder and the Rev. Joseph B. Coyne, of St. Gabriel's Church.

Howard Class Urged to Join 'Believers'

President Mordecai W. Johnson of Howard University yesterday urged the 830 students graduating from the university to join the ranks of radical believers in human dignity to help set people free throughout the world.

Speaking at the annual baccalaureate services on the university campus, Dr. Johnson told the graduates that they, who were descended from the "humblest and most disadvantaged people in the world," were graduating from a university in spite of the fact that it was once said that they were incapable of it.

The university head recalled that Howard students today are the sons and daughters of "the noblest minority of human beings who ever lived upon the earth."

Through Radical Ethics

It was through the "radical universal ethics" and belief in human dignity of such people as Thomas Jefferson, Harriet Tubman, William Lloyd Garrison, Abraham Lincoln and other leaders that the Negroes were able to rise from their state of slavery, he said.

The things these early emancipators sought to accomplish are not finished, Dr. Johnson declared. A minority in the Nation today sees segregation on account of race as "a blasphemy against God and a decadent and rotten pillar in democracy" and are determined to eradicate it, he asserted.

The University president pointed out that today, as in the days preceding the Civil War, the Nation's self-interest will be served by the "prophetic radicalism" of this minority. Added to the ill effects of the blasphemy of segregation and discrimination, he said, is the fact that communism sees it.

Dr. Johnson deplored the fact that America "has not lifted a finger" to make Britain, France, Belgium and Holland give up the exploitation of native peoples living under the colonial system in Africa, Indonesia and Asia.

"You can go make money, have a good time and set yourselves up as the elite cultivated Negro," Dr. Johnson declared, "but if you do you will be the most contemptuous spiritual bastards ever born in the world."

"There is only one way to live an honorable existence," he continued, declaring that it is to "join the ranks of the radical believers in the dignity of human life and help set the people free."

"You have got to do it or God will rob you of your manhood and womanhood and you will know He has robbed you before you die," Dr. Johnson declared. "Your joy will be where their joy was—in walking with the Eternal in the great redemptive work of setting people free."

Stuart Chase Emphasizes Culture Idea

Recognition, not money, is the worker's strongest incentive, graduating American University seniors were told last night.

The commencement speaker, Stuart Chase, said this was only one of the discoveries made in the field of social sciences, and said that more dependable knowledge on "how to live with everybody" has been gathered in the last generation than in all previous history.

Approximately 300 seniors and 49 graduate students were awarded degrees in the outdoor exercises under a clear night sky on the campus. About 1000 relatives and friends were present for the ceremony, held before Hurst Hall.

Dr. Douglass Speaks

Earlier in the day Dr. Paul F. Douglass, university president, spoke at a baccalaureate service for the graduates in the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Nebraska and New Mexico aves. nw.

Chase, author and specialist in the social sciences, said the discovery that under certain conditions recognition was a greater incentive than money was made in an experiment over a period of months with six factory workers in the town of Hawthorne, near Chicago. It is only one of the accomplishments of recent study of mankind, he said.

More important, he said, "is the culture concept in anthropology and sociology." The basic idea of the culture concept, he said, "is as simple as it is profound: An individual cannot be understood apart from the culture which contains him.

Used in Broadest Sense

"This is a large overheard concept, on the scale of Darwin's 'Evolution,' and probably even more important. 'Culture' is used here, of course, in its broadest sense to include all group behavior patterns, artifacts, and belief systems.

"No normal human being ever existed who was not the product of his culture, as well as of his genes. Every one of us is culture bound, practically from the cradle," Chase said.

Forecasts Great Solutions

Given another generation of relatively free inquiry and many of the great unanswered questions about man's behavior will be solved, Chase said.

Chase was given an honorary degree of doctor of letters at the exercises.

Four local men were graduated from the School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs with Ph.D. degrees. They included George Bush, 65 Beech ave., Bethesda; Louis Ducoff, 305 Mansfield rd., Silver Spring; Mario Sonnino, 657 Farragut st. nw., and Chancellor Williams, 5000 Sheriff rd. ne.

Also awarded Ph. D. degrees were Severino Medina Montano of Manila, in public administration, and Bernard Lester Barnard of Harmon, Kans., in political science.

Degree Meant for Forrestal

Robert V. Fletcher, chairman of the board of trustees, announced that the honorary degree of doctor of laws customarily given, was not awarded this year because of the death of the intended recipient, former Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

Fletcher said that Forrestal had not been notified of the honor before his death, but had been nominated in a poll of 150 prominent citizens for the award.

Dr. Douglass presided at the exercises and Prof. Walter F. Shenton served as marshal. The Rev. A. Powell Davies, pastor of All Souls Unitarian Church, gave the invocation, and the Rev. Philip Gordon Scott, pastor of Westmoreland Congregational Church, the benediction.

A Communication

Pearson Replies

I HAVE been greatly disturbed that some people seem to believe that my reporting of the illness of the late James Forrestal should have contributed to his death.

I shall not attempt to answer those motivated by grudges or bias, but to those who are really sincere in this belief I should like to set forth the following facts:

1. After I reported on Mr. Forrestal's mental illness, there was little other reference to him by me either in the press or on the radio. I did compliment him on his cooperation with Secretary of Defense Johnson and I also suggested that he be given a long vacation at Government expense.

2. At the time of my radio references to Mr. Forrestal's illness he was under sedatives; was not permitted to listen to any radio programs or read the newspapers.

3. The Navy immediately issued a statement which had the effect of denying Mr. Forrestal's illness. If the Navy on the other hand, had taken proper precautions instead of minimizing the facts, Jim Forrestal would be alive today.

Navy doctors knew, as they now admit, that he had made earlier suicide attempts in Florida. They also knew that every other medical institution in the country puts patients with suicidal tendencies on the ground floor.

Unfortunately, Navy doctors minimize psychiatric treatment, which may have been why they called Mr. Forrestal's illness "nervous exhaustion" and put him on the sixteenth floor of the hospital tower.

4. Capt. George Raines, the Navy doctor in charge, has since made the following amazing statement: "I recognized the well-known psychiatric fact that the next 30 days would constitute the most dangerous period of the illness as far as suicide was concerned . . . I felt that the assumption of responsibility must rest on my shoulders and not be shared with the family or other naval authorities."

And after admitting that this was the most dangerous period, the man who assumed responsibility departed for Canada.

5. IN THE end it may be found that Mr. Forrestal's friends had more to do with his death than his critics. For those close to him now admit privately that he had been sick for some time, suffered embarrassing lapses too painful to be mentioned here.

Illness such as Jim Forrestal experienced does not come all of a sudden, like a fall from a horse. It begins months in advance. And such an illness cannot be pushed aside or overlooked. It must be treated.

Yet during most of last winter, when Jim Forrestal was under heavy responsibilities and definitely not a well man, the little coterie of newspapermen who now insinuate Jim was killed by his critics, encouraged him to stay on. This got to be almost an obsession, both on their part and his, until Mr. Truman's final request for his resignation undoubtedly worsened the illness.

6. The real fact is that Jim Forrestal had a relatively good press. All one need do is examine the newspaper files to see that his press was far better than that of some of his old associates.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, for instance, was one of the most criticized Cabinet members of the last decade. She took it with a smile and is still working for her country.

Winston Churchill had bitter criticism heaped upon his head and suffered one of the most crushing political blows in recent history. However, he still remains an active force in British politics.

Herbert Hoover retired from office one of the most criticized and beaten-up political figures of recent years. Yet he has come back as a definite force for good government.

7. IT IS true that when Jim Forrestal retired, the Justice Department was in the process of investigating the Arabian oil purchases made by the Navy during his administration. I feel sure this did not involve him personally, though he was known to be dreadfully upset by it.

It is also true that Forrestal's policy on Palestine had been reversed, together with his policy of strengthening German cartels, and his policy of arming Latin Americans. These reversals, however, were official acts of government, in no way inspired by the press or radio.

8. If we are to withhold criticism of a man because of possible illness or danger to his life, then congressional investigations, a free press, and our entire system of government by checks and balances becomes difficult.

For instance, when the FBI cross-examined the late Lawrence Duggan of the State Department during last summer's Un-American Activities Committee probe, they had no idea he would thereafter plunge to his death from a New York office building. This may have had no connection with his death, but rightly or wrongly the Un-American Activities Committee and the FBI investigation got the blame.

The Un-American Activities Committee was also embarrassed by the fact that Harry White, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, died a few days after he was cross-examined—his death reportedly having resulted from an overdose of digitalis.

IN OCTOBER of 1946, this column exposed the Dream House and Dream Lake built for Senator Theodore Bilbo of Mississippi by war contractors. These favors for the Senator were nothing less than bribes in return for his help in securing war contracts. They were so labeled by this column.

Unfortunately and regrettably, Senator Bilbo, a few months later, died.

Last summer, an expose of salary kickbacks which Congressman Parnell Thomas forced his secretaries to pay him led to his indictment by a Federal grand jury. Since then Mr. Thomas has been seriously ill at Walter Reed Hospital and Army doctors state that the illness has been aggravated by worry over facing trial.

This is a most regrettable and unfortunate fact. But the above cases pose a difficult question for both newspapers and congressional investigations. Are public officials to be immune from criticism or investigation for fear of impairing their health?

This will probably be misunderstood by people who read in haste as classifying Jim Forrestal with the gentlemen mentioned above. Such is not meant to be the case.

However, if we are to withhold the check of congressional investigation or newspaper criticism from any public official, no matter how mild, because of health, then the Government of checks and balances created by the Founding Fathers is thrown out of gear.

It was not criticism by the press which caused Jim Forrestal to conclude that his life was no longer worth living. There were other factors in his life that made him unhappy.

GWU Seniors Told to Strive For Justice

More than 1000 June graduates of George Washington University, at the halfway mark in commencement-week exercises, yesterday received formal farewells of their alma mater.

Now until Wednesday, when they receive their degrees on the university campus, parties, receptions and dances will be the order of the day.

Last night, however, seriousness prevailed.

"The Spiritual Fabric"

In the main auditorium of Washington Cathedral, the students flanked by friends, family and faculty, heard University President Cloyd Heck Marvin urge them to be humble with their knowledge and to strive for justice and peace.

The future alumni, with their cowls of green, gold, crimson and white, listened intently as the Rev. Karl M. Block, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California and a 1907 graduate of the university, expressed the hope they could "restore the spiritual fabric to a semi-decadent society."

In his baccalaureate sermon, Bishop Block stressed the need for giving priority in thought to the family, church and state.

"Social Apologies"

He deplored what he termed "social apologies" of individuals who, he said, are too preoccupied with personal interests to take part in civic functions and excuse or rationalize their neglect.

"Don't lead an empty, cultured, pagan life," Bishop Block urged, "but put first things first, with emphasis on the essentials of peace and making our democracy work."

District Pressmen Demand Inquiry Into Union's Finances

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

An independent investigation into the charges that hundreds of thousands of dollars of the International Printing Pressmen's Union were misused was asked yesterday by a special committee of the union's Local No. 1 of Washington.

It was learned that the committee has sent a sharp letter to J. H. De La Rosa, international president, demanding that responsibility for "lax financial operations" be fixed. The committee also wrote that it was dissatisfied with a report by the union's board of directors on their investigation of charges that the late George L. Berry, while head of the organization, manipulated the international's funds to enrich himself.

"Omissions" Noted

The rank and file demand for an investigation was based on the contention that the report of the international officers does not answer "serious charges" made concerning Berry's use of union funds. The special committee wrote that there are "certain statements and omissions" in the report which "we would like to have cleared up."

The special committee noted that the international's directors earlier this year voted to file a claim against the estate of the late Joseph C. Orr, former secretary-treasurer, in an attempt to recover money allegally withdrawn from the union treasury.

Directors Criticized

"The committee is especially concerned that the board of directors of the international union, many of whom held office under the late President Berry, advanced no explanation concerning how the late Mr. Orr was able to withdraw $175 per month for 12 years without attracting the attention of the directors, or the auditors, when it is mandatory that the president countersign all checks issued," the letter read.

The special committee, whose members are expected to be subpenaed by a House Labor Subcommittee which has scheduled public hearings Thursday on the Pressmen's Union, accused the board of directors of failure to take prompt action to collect money the union claims the Orr estate owes the international. It also asked why prompt action was not taken by the international to collect $61,000 of union funds used to purchase farm equipment for Berry's personal farm.

Today we pay tribute to every man who has given the work of his hands, his heart, his brains and his life for the preservation of freedom and civilization in the world.
But for us, Americans, our thoughts are pointed directly to the unknown soldier—one unidentified, unidentifiable fragment of earth — who symbolizes the thousands who sacrificed themselves that we and our children's children might enjoy a fuller life of liberty and greater happiness.

BOSTON, MAY 29.—Touching some of the bases:

In New York the other day, Yankee Manager Casey Stengel neatly infuriated the city of Cleveland by saying forthrightly that the Yankees could win the pennant if they finished ahead of the Red Sox. He was brushing off the Indians as a pennant factor.

POVICH

It was somewhat early in the season to be discounting the 1948 pennant winners, but Stengel had at least three solid reasons for his predictions. The Yankees were out in front, winging. The Indians were laboring far down in the second division, and the Red Sox were beginning to wake up.

During their home stay, the Red Sox won eight of their first 10 games to zoom from seventh into second place on the strength of all things, pitching. That is the same item that has been keeping the Yankees up, plus Tommy Henrich, and Cleveland's plight is traceable to the lack of pitching.

Stengel, however, has been getting away with a mild form of murder. He has been juggling his lineup with two first baseman, two third basemen, and five outfielders shuttling in and out of the batting order, depending on what kind of pitching the Yanks are facing.

THE LUCKIEST BREAK the Red Sox are getting this year, actually happened in 1947. The paradox is, it was a break, literally, a broken finger suffered by Southpaw Mel Parnell who tried to stop a line drive at the Red Sox farm in Louisville with his bare hands. The doctors set the fracture incorrectly. With his misshapen finger he found he could throw a screw ball and a slider, and now he's the top pitcher of the Red Sox.

The Indians are a different ball club than they were last year for numerous reasons, and the sore arms of Bob Feller and Bob Lemon are not the chief items in Cleveand's decline. Their great doubleplay combination of Lou Boudreau and Joe Gordon is no longer terrifying. Boudreau has slowed up so, well, so rapidly, the Cleveand infield is no longer one of the good ones.

And speaking of the Red Sox, as we were a while back, Tex Hughson is doing nicely in his pitching comeback, but yesterday he did the Boston club a distnct and what may be far reaching disservice. At a time when Birdie Tebbetts was on a hitting streak with six safe blows in his last seven trips to the plate, Hughson borrowed Tebbetts' favorite bat and broke it on a foul tip.

THE DETROIT TIGERS have been doing tolerably well, but there is some wonder if Rookie Manager Red Rolfe can keep up the pace. Rolfe is a worrier, he's got plenty to worry about, and he has picked up none of the weight he lost in Florida.

His chief worry is the lack of a first baseman. Big George Vico has been a dismal flop and the Tigers are now operating with Paul Campbell, Red Sox castoff at first. And their rookie sensation of the first 10 days, Johnny Groth, has cooled off rapidly, and Dick Wakefield who was supposed to be on a comeback, is now hitting .200.

The team that Stengel didn't give much of a nod, but which could take it all is, of course, Connie Mack's A's, who are just beginning to get the good pitching they were supposed to show. The A's have supplanted the Indians' infield as the best in the league, and with Sam Chapman having one of his good years with the bat, they could crowd both the Yankees and Red Sox.

THE YEAR'S toughest break was that which struck the White Sox this weekend, with Gus Zernial suffering a broken collarbone when he missed a shoestring catch. That injury will put on the bench for two months the hottest rookie of the year. Zernial was leading the league when he was hurt, and without him the White Sox could easily lapse into a last place battle with the Browns.

The Nats, who have been hovering on the fringe of the first division, are not the best club in the league, but they are certainly the surprise team. They may lack the power to move into serious contention, but defensively they are one of the good ones, and every club in the league, with the exception of the Yanks, would like Kuhel's pitching over their own.

Paul Calvert Wins Fifth For Griffs

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, May 29.—In the same park where they hit no home runs at all last year, the Nats collected two today, plus a dozen other hits and outmuscled the Red Sox, 10 to 4, before 26,806 unhappy Boston fans.

The Nats had an excellent blend of power and piching, the latter item being served by Paul Calvert who shut the Red Sox out for seven innings and coasted in behind his big lead for his fifth win against three losses.

Clyde Vollmer and Eddie Robinson were the Nats' home run hitters. Each of their clouts was loaded with two runs. Vollmer rapped his seventh of the year against Ellis Kinder in the seventh inning, and Robinson whacked his an inning later, initiating Rookie Frank Quinn into the hazards of pitching in the majors.

The losing pitcher was Kinder, who took a four-game winning streak into the game and was bumped for five consecutive hits and four runs in the fourth inning.

Ted's Homer Ruins Shutout

Calvert was on the brilliant side until the last two innings. He had a three-hit shutout going until the eighth, when Ted Williams checked that ambition with a home-run swat into the right field bullpen.

All of a sudden with two out in the ninth, the Red Sox got tough with Calvert and rapped him for five hits in a row, rushing three runs across the plate in a rally that still fell half a dozen runs short.

All of the Nats, including Calvert took part in the 14-hit barrage against Kinder and Quinn. Vollmer contributed two singles in addition to his homer.

Twice in the first three innings the Red Sox put runners on third base with one out and couldn't score against Calvert. And then in the fourth the Nats set him up a 4-0 lead.

Two Bosox Errors Costly

Stewart opened that inning with a single to right, and scored all the way from first when Williams booted Vollmer's single into left field. Robinson followed with an infield single, and Kozar delivered Voller home with a single to right. Dente singled off Doerr's glove to score Robinson, and when Tebbetts threw wild to head off Dente on a steal of second, Kozar scored from third.

The Nats got their fifth run very simply in the sixth. Calvert simply singled to center with one out, and Yost simply doubled against the left field wall to get him home.

Kinder was still in there, if illogically, in the seventh, and the Nats whacked him for three more runs. Vollmer's swat over the left field wall also scored Stewart who had walked, and when Yale's Quinn moved in for his big league debut, the Nats got another run on a single by Evans.

They upped their lead to 10-0 against Quinn in the eighth after Robertson's pop fell in short right for a double. With two out, Robinson drove his eighth homer of the year a fur piece into the right field seats.

How the Red Sox got those three runs in the ninth, really isn't worth mentioning.

IN SHORT—The Nats were winning today in their jinx park, where they had won only four times in their 24 previous games here . . . Robertson was the only Nat without a hit, after seven innings, and he got his in the eighth on a wind-blown pop that fell for a double . . . Bill Lefebvre, former Washington lefthander and now coach at Brown University, brought in a big southpaw pitcher named Adolph Anderson for a trial with the Nats before the game . . . Vollmer's seventh-inning homer tied him with Robinson for the home run leadership on the Nats at seven, but only briefly . . . Robinson got his eighth in the next inning . . . The Nats have already hit 29 homers, only two fewer than they hit all last season . . . Gil Coan was discharged from the hospital today after his head injury yesterday, but was out of uniform . . . Walt Masterson and Sid Hudson will go against the Yankees in the Decoration Day double-header at Griffith Stadium . . . facing Tommy Byrne and Allie Reynolds.

Boudreau's Hit In 11th Gives Indians Split

Cleveland, May 29 (AP).—Manager Lou Boudreau's pinch single with the bases loaded drove in the winning run in the eleventh inning today as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago White Sox, 2-1, in the second game of a doubleheader before 47,769 persons.

The victory, which followed Chicago's 4-2 win in the opener, was the first for the Tribe in four doubleheaders this season. Ancient Satchel Paige pitched seven-hit ball to best young Billy Pierce in the nightcap pitching duel.

Randy Gumpert scattered nine hits in the opener to post his fourth win against three defeats.

Babe Captures Eastern Open

Essex Fells, N. J., May 29 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred (Babe) Didrikson Zaharias of Ferndale, N. Y., walked off with the Women's Eastern Open Golf Championship today at the Essex Fells Country Club.

Thirteen strokes ahead of the field going into today's final round, she maintained the same lead when she equaled the women's par with a 75. Combined with her opening 74 and the women's course record 70 she shot Saturday, that gave the former Olympic track star 219 for the 54-hole event and brought her first-place money of $1000.

Beverly Hanson of Indio, Calif., a semifinalist in the 1948 National Amateur championship, moved into second place when she tallied a 73 in her final round. That gave her 232 for the tournament, two strokes better than Patty Berg of Minneapolis, Minn.

Betty Mims White of Dallas, Tex., took third money of $500 with a card that showed three 81's.

Walter Hagen Coming Back To 'Celebrities'

The one and only Walter Hagen will play in the National Celebrities golf tournament again.

Down at Richmond, Va., where he's watching the pros battle for the PGA championship he won five times—four in a row, the nonpareil Haig accepted in this fashion:

"You bet I'll be there, they play my kind of golf in that tournament."

The last time Hagen had a golf club in his hands was three years ago at the Celebrities Tournament when he smacked a whale of a shot down the first tee at Columbia Country Club.

He never left the first tee, however. In typical Hagen fashion, the Haig motioned to his son, Walter jr., and little Haig finished the round for his illustrious dad.

Junior Hagen, a resident of Richmond now and public relations director for the Hermitage Club, host to the PGA, wants to reverse the role this time.

"Please, Pop," he pleaded yesterday, "Let me hit the ball off the first tee and you play the rest of the round this time."

"Not a chance," replied the senior Haig. "I don't trust you with a wood club and if you flubbed your tee shot just think of the black mark on the Hagen record. Besides, I've got business in the clubhouse."

Joost's Homer Beats Yanks, 3-1, for Macks

New York, May 29 (AP).—Alex Kellner and Eddie Joost combined today to pace the Philadelphia Athletics to a 3-1 victory over the Yankees, snapping the New Yorkers' six-game winning streak. Kellner limited the league-leaders to six hits while Joost poled out a two-run homer in the fifth inning.

By salvaging the finale of a three-game series, the A's regained second place from the Boston Red Sox, who bowed to the Washington Senators.

The A's broke a scoreless tie in the fifth when they touched Bob Porterfield for all their runs. Buddy Rosar opened the winning drive with the first of his three straight singles. Pete Suder's sacrifice put Rosar on second and the former Yankee catcher dashed home on Kellner's first hit of the year, a pop fly single to left. Joost then hit his ninth homer into the left field seats.

Giants Beat Phils Twice, 4-3 and 3-0

Philadelphia, May 29 (AP).—The New York Giants turned back the Philadelphia Phillies in both games of a doubleheader here today, 4-3 and 3-0.

They won the opener on Bobby Thomason's 2-run homer in the fifteenth inning and coasted through in the second behind the one-hit pitching of Hank Behrman in a game called in the seventh on account of the Sunday blue law.

Rose Seeks 3d Straight In '500'

Indianapolis, May 29 (AP).—The fastest field ever assembled for the world famous 500-mile automobile race will roar from the starting line tomorrow intent on blasting speed records.

The 33 daring drivers, ranging from a three-time winner of the race to a freshman just 22 years old, will pilot their racers at terrifying speeds for prizes totaling $185,000, richest ever offered. The triumphant driver will get the $20,000 first prize, plus $100 for every lap of the perilous race he leads. The winner's share, including cash awards from accessory manufacturers, may hit $45,000.

The Speedway management, expecting a crowd upward of 150,000, was hoping for its traditionally clear, cool weather, but the forecast was for scattered showers and perhaps thunder storms. The temperature probably will be in the middle 70s fanned by a 15-mile-an-hour wind.

The start scheduled for 11 a. m., Central daylight time, may be delayed in event of rain.

The starting field, a blend of veterans and daring youngsters, is topped by the one-two punch of the 1947 and 1948 races—Mauri Rose, South Bend, Ind., and Billy Holland, Reading, Pa., who finished first and second, respectively, in those two races.

The cocky 43-year-old Rose, a three-time winner, will be striving for his third consecutive in the same snug four cylinder front-drive car he drove to victory last year and the year before. In 1941 he took over as relief driver for Floyd Davis and finished first. Rose and Holland will have a new teammate, George Connor, Los Angeles. He will drive a new and smaller car built expressly for dirt track racing. All are under the banner of the veteran retired racer and automotive engineer, Lou Moore, also of Los Angeles.

Rose's record-breaking speed in the 1948 race was 119.814 miles an hour. Rose, at 43, is the oldest driver in the race. The youngest is Troy Ruttman, 22, of Ontario, Calif.

Air Four Times

Radio station WOL (1260) will pick up the Memorial Day classic from the Indianapolis Speedway four times today—

At 11:45 to 12:15, the start of the race; 1:30 to 1:45, the one-third mark; 2:45 to 3:00, two-thirds of the way; and from 4:00 to 4:30, the finish.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Reorganization Plans Are Ready If Congress Passes Bill by Tuesday

The Administration is ready to send several plans to Congress to reorganize Federal agencies and activities if the reorganization bill becomes law before Tuesday night.

No. 1 would start the rebuilding at the Labor Department. To be transferred to it would be Federal Security's Bureau of Employment Security, which is composed of the old U. S. Employment Service and Social Security's Bureau of Unemployment Compensation.

No. 2 would reorganize the Civil Service Commission. The commission president would be given far more responsibility and he would be given an executive assistant to act in his absence.

No. 3 would transfer the War Assets Administration and Treasury's Bureau of Federal Supply to the Federal Works Agency.

WAR CLAIMS COMMISSION: The President is ready to name three members of this new agency. A score of persons are scrambling for the jobs. The agency will have a staff of fewer than 50 employes.

FEDERAL POWER: The President will renominate Leland Olds for a new term on the Federal Power Commission. He has definitely rejected the pressure of private power interests to pass over Olds. A fight may be made in the Senate on Olds' nomination, which will be made this week.

William B. Greenwood is the new executive officer of Interior's Bureau of Indian Affairs. He transferred from the Budget Bureau . . . Joseph W. Kappel of Columbia University has joined the statistical standards staff at the Budget Bureau . . . Ira L. Smith has a best-seller in his new book: "Low and Inside," a book of baseball stories. About 25,000 copies have been sold. Ira is in the Civil Aeronautics press section . . . Paul A. Smith, a commissioned officer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, is slated to be the United States representative to the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization.

PRESSURE: A new attempt is reported to be afoot to get a Republican fired from his Federal job. The Republican is Paul Griffith, former commander of the American Legion, who is an assistant to Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

Democratic members of Congress from Pennsylvania are said to be trying to apply the hot foot to Griffith. A number of them have sent a letter to Democratic headquarters demanding Griffith's ouster. Griffith is accused of undercutting the Administration's housing program when he was Legion commander.

MONEY: The Senate Appropriations Committee is slated to act on the second deficiency bill on Tuesday. And it's about time. A few Federal employes already have missed paydays because of the tie-up on the bill and many more are threatened with a delay in being paid.

Employes in Labor's Bureau of Veterans Reemployment Rights have already missed one payday. Several of Postoffice's major activities are running short on money. If there's an undue delay, the department won't have money to meet the payrolls of some clerks, carriers and railway mail service employes.

Several offices on Capitol Hill are about "broke." The District Rent Control Office, National Mediation Board, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service are other activities in financial trouble.

SECRETARIES: Those who were rated ineligible by the Civil Service Commission are planning a counterattack. These girls, now in secretarial jobs, are insisting that Civil Service delay certifying secretaries from an eligible register until after all appeals are decided. They will be backed up by members of Congress.

The girls make this point—that better jobs will all be filled by the time Civil Service can act on the flood of appeals from secretaries the commission has ruled to be ineligible.

Schools Still Teach '3 Rs,' U. S. Official Tells Parents

Misunderstanding Of Methods Reported By Dr. Goodykoontz In Magazine Article

Today's schools teach the "three Rs," but some parents are just confused by the method of teaching, according to Dr. Bess Goodykoontz, director of the elementary education division, United States Office of Education.

In Educational Trend, a supplement to Educator's Washington Dispatch, released yesterday, Dr. Goodykoontz said: "Sometimes parents and others get the idea that schools not only aren't teaching children the three Rs, but worse still, that they don't intend to do so.

"This just isn't so. No professional group discounts the importance of a thorough grounding in the fundamental tools of learning."

Centered in Skills

The confusion, she believes, springs from misunderstanding of teaching methods.

"This generation of parents grew up with a curriculum which was centered in skills. The methods in use for generations past brought facts and skills to them first, with applictaion of their learning later on.

"The order of learning in those days worked from the memorization of organized skills and facts to the use of that learning. Modern methods fairly well turn that order about.

"Today, definitions of words and phrases come after children know something about their meaning. And we develop skills in children after teachers recognize a need for those skills."

Teaching of Alphabet

An an illustration, Dr. Goodykoontz said, "Schools of a generation ago taught the alphabet fairly early in the first year. Now we know that learning the individual letters is scarcely any help at all to young children in recognizing words and phrases. The letters become important when children begin to see likenesses in words, and when they begin to write.

"These changes in what children learn or the time at which they learn it often confuses parents. The changes are not based on whim, fads or fancies. They are based on continuous and consistent study of two things: First what we can learn about how children grow and learn. Second, what learnings are important for children to have. What makes sense to the boys and girls, what is socially useful to them, counts in deciding what skills are learned and when."

Trade Board Book Aims at Conventions

Washington, the Board of Trade asserted yesterday, has certain assets that make it a natural so far as conventions are concerned.

The District's year 'round weather, for instance, has earned it the tag of "the city of average temperature and humidity," according to the board's Greater National Capital Committee.

This being so, the committee observed, Washington thereby is happily situated, weather-wise, to be the seat of as many conventions as it can contain.

The committee made known its views yesterday in a 96-page "Convention Facilities" book aimed at helping convention and trade show officials to plan sessions here. Weather aside, the book also is crammed with other selling points.

Did you know, for instance, that:

Sixth per cent of this country's population lives less than four hours from Washington by air, or overnight by train?

More than 3000 aircraft land at National Airport — "the world's finest"—every week? And 288 passenger trains arrive and depart Union Station daily?

Hotels here have 8500 rooms available for transient guests? Automobiles to the number of more than 28,000 can be parked at 65 public garages and 230 parking lots?

Parks in the Nation's Capital total about 12,500 acres over 730 reservations? They have facilities for bicycling, boating, fishing, concerts, bridle paths, swimming, golf, picnicking, and so on?

The book also contains detailed individual hotel information, including floor plans, load limits on floor and elevator, electrical currents and outlets, and dimensions of all public rooms.

In addition, the D. C. National Guard Armory, Uline Arena and Constitution Hall are shown pictorially, and names and addresses are listed of all transportation companies, radio and television stations, newspapers, wire services, newsreel and photo services and sightseeing companies.

Jewish Memorial Service

A service in memory of the 1943 uprising of Jews in the Warsaw ghetto will be held at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday at B'nai Israel Congregation, 14th and Emerson sts. nw. Rabbi Henry Segal, spiritual leader of the congregation, will be the speaker.

The exhibit will be open daily from 12:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. Luncheon and refreshments will be served by the Veritas Club of St. Paul's Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Spending the Holiday in Town . . .

By Henry Romano—The Washington Post

EASY WAY—Everyone didn't go out of town for the Memorial Day weekend, as these pictures show. Above, a family picnic in Rock Creek Park solved the where-to-go-on-the-holiday problem for the Kramer family. Enjoying the outing are (left to right): Bill, 2, Mrs. Sydney Kramer, Nancy, 8, Mr. Kramer and Betsey, 4. Kramers live at 3707 Yuma st. nw.

NO TRAVEL—Sunbathing at the P st. beach does away with travel on crowded highways. Elizabeth Maher and Lila Jean Hegle, of 2217 Q st. nw., apply suntan lotion in preparation for sunning

BR-RR-R—Rock Creek is too chilly for wading as you can see by the expression of Mrs. Mary Wade, dipping a toe to test the temperature. Her husband, Jim, awaits the result of the test. They live at 102 Irvington st. sw.

Capital Area to Honor War Dead

The Nation will pay solemn and grateful homage today to the thousands of hero dead, lying at peace in cemeteries here and throughout the world.

The Capital's traditional Memorial Day ceremonies will be held at 10:30 a. m. at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery, with Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.) making the chief address.

Other services are planned throughout the area by civic and patriotic groups. The Weather Bureau, meanwhilee, predicted sunny skies and a high temperature of 75 degrees.

Arlington Cemetery itself, its graves flag-decorated by veterans organizations and Boy Scouts, will be open from 7:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. today.

Urged to Stay Strong

As America prepared to show its gratitude to the dead of four wars, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson urged the Nation in a statement issued yesterday to remain so strong no enemy will dare to launch another war.

"The account will be marked 'paid in full' only when we can guarantee their wives, their sons and daughters of a strong America, forever free of the threat of another war. We can have peace if we remain strong. Peace through strength must be our goal."

Bolstering his words with similar statements were Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Louis E. Denefeld, Navy Chief of Operations, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff.

Federal and District Government offices will be closed today, and department stores, chain grocery stores, banks and public and parochial schools will follow suit.

Yesterday, lured by crisp and sunny weather, most Washingtonians, their relatives and in-laws spent the day outdoors.

Picnickers crammed every available space in Rock Creek Park, and other favorite recreation spots, braving the gnats and flying baseballs.

There wasn't a parking space within a mile of the Zoo, where an estimated 35,000 kids and their parents peered three and four deep at such favorites as the monkeys and the bears.

Business was brisk at golf courses and tennis courts, but temperatures that hovered in the 60's all day discouraged all but the hardiest swimmers.

Auto traffic in and around Washington was "pretty heavy," the American Automobile Association said, and plenty of camera-laden sightseers could be seen meandering about the city's sightseeing high spots.

Bus, rail, and air traffic, slow yesterday, was expected to reach a homegoing peak this afternoon and evening. Highway traffic should be heaviest from 2 p. m. to midnight.

Washington Churches Do Homage to War Heroes

Calvary Methodist Pastor Describes Economy as Aimed In Two Directions

Clergymen and churchgoers yesterday paid tribute to the Nation's war dead at Memorial Day church services.

At Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw., Dr. Orris G. Robison said that while all of us want to be rid of war, we do not seem to know how to stop it.

He asked how many believe in our hearts that peace is possible and how many are willing to risk the Nation to a peace economy.

Dr. Robinson said that the Nation seems to be pointing its economy in two directions at once.

While we seek through diplomatic channels to find a way to peace, and we protest sincerely that we want to be at peace, he said, we prepare for war. As the international situation eases, we want to turn the economy back to peacetime economy, but we are afraid of the fearsome results of a financial depression, he added.

"Since the President has seen fit to call us to prayer, we have the privilege of calling on him and the leaders of the Nation to be consistent men of prayer," Dr. Robinson said.

"They have a superhuman task," he continued, "in their own strength they are completely inadequate but in the strength of God they can possibly succeed."

Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of Gunton-Temple Presbyterian Church, 16th and Newton sts. nw., pointed out in his sermon that the Nation's war heroes gave their lives for high ideals. It may seem that many of these ideals have not been reached, that on the human level failure and disappointment are the dominant note, he continued.

In God's sight a man who lives faithfully for great ideals is never a failure, Dr. Braskamp declared.

The finest tribute we can pay to the heroes of the past, the Presbyterian minister said, is to carry on their fight for the God-inspired ideals for which they gave themselves so sacrificially.

He urged members of the congregation to fight against the root causes of warfare, to seek to purge from themselves and others the attitudes which cause war because "war is not inevitable if the heart of man becomes filled with Christ-like virtues."

Love Song Tosses Admiral for Loss

A teasing little love ballad called "You Belong To Me" tossed Vice Admiral William M. Fechteler for a loss of possibly $18,700 last night.

Had the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations known it, he'd have won at least a refrigerator and—with millions of envious radio listeners hanging on his every word—a shot at guessing the "Stop the Music" mystery melody over WMAL (ABC).

When called a short time later and asked what happened, the admiral jauntily replied: "I struck out."

Admiral Fechteler, who lives at 2800 E st nw., announced he didn't feel bad about it at all. He said he was taking it philosophically. Besides, he mused, "I never expected to be called."

And then, apparently unable to resist the opportunity to express himself, he added: "If I had won, I'd turn it in if we would get the pay bill for the Armed Forces through Congress."

Takoma Park Makes News

Proposal Would Hike Budget And Lower Tax Rate, Too

If the unusual is news, Takoma Park City Council has made it.

The Council's Finance Committee has proposed the city's biggest budget, with pay raises for numerous employes and bigger appropriations to nearly all departments.

And—what's more—it proposes a 7-cent cut in the city's tax rate.

A public hearing will be held on the proposed budget at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Takoma Park Fire House. The budget is for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Increase of $94,513.40

Amounting to $309,771, the tentative fiscal estimate is an increase of $94,513.40 over the present budget, Councilmen J. W. Nies, Sherwood Githens and Walter H. McClenon, members of the Finance Committee, said yesterday.

The proposed cut in the tax rate, from $1.20 to $1.13, is made possible, they said, by these developments:

1. Higher assessments. The new rate is based on an $18,000,000 assessable base.

2. An expected $20,000 from Montgomery County in lieu of police services.

3. Funds amounting to $314,190 expected from the State.

The proposed budget increases the City Police Department appropriation from $26,930 to $41,570, raising the salary of Police Chief C. E. Thomas $900 to $4200 and providing also salary raises for other policemen and firemen.

The salary of City Clerk and Treasurer Harold Hilliard would be increased from $3600 to $4500 and he would receive $500 additional for serving as executive secretary to the council.

Other Items Listed

Other items in the budget provide $20,000 for recreation, an increase of $9500; $88,325 for highways, an increase of $27,935; general government, $25,580, compared to the present $16,300; Fire Department, $75,650 against the present $46,880.

Public safety, other than police and fire, was decreased from $1700 to $50; conservation of health from $500 to $300 and miscellaneous expenses were reduced from $5857.50 to $5271.

The committee said the estimated increase from assessment boosts will amount to about $40,900. Actual receipts from the State this past year were far beyond the estimated $209,175.

The finance committee said funds received from the State was "on the increase," helping solve local budget problems.

Only $40,900 of the expected jump in revenue would come from the higher assessments, the remainder coming from other sources such as the State, the committee said.

Deadline Near In Alexandria Primary Filing

A pattern for Alexandria's Democratic primary August 2 is slated to be cut this week, with the deadline for filing formal notice of candidacy arriving at midnight Friday.

At stake in the primary, considered tantamount to election in the traditionally Democratic community, will be party nominations for six State-supported offices. They include city sergeant, civil and police court judge, juvenile court judge, commissioner of revenue, city treasurer, and delegate to the Virginia General Assembly.

Three of the six incumbents already have filed petitions of candidacy with Gilbert J. Cox, Democratic committee chairman. The other three are expected to follow suit before the deadline.

Already on record as seeking renomination are City Sergeant J. Frank Moriarity, Commissioner of Revenue C. Aubrey Callahan, and City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan.

Officeholders expected to file this week include Police Court Judge James R. Duncan, State Delegate Armistead L. Boothe and Juvenile Court Judge Marion B. West. Duncan and Boothe have stated they intend to run.

So far Moriarity is the only incumbent with opposition. A petition of candidacy already has been filed by W. Hugh Travers, a construction foreman, while a third aspirant reportedly is Benjamin F. Swann, a retired policeman.

Associate Judge Harry F. Kenney said he had considered becoming a candidate for the Juvenile Court judgeship but has not finally made up his mind.

Cabby Admits Holdup Stories Were False

A 27-year-old cab driver, who reported he was held up by two soldiers Saturday night much the same as he was robbed by two civilians a year ago, yesterday admitted to police both reports were false.

As a result Thomas M. Lipscomb, jr., of 1613 G st. se., was charged with making a false report. Police said he told them he had made the reports because of family troubles.

Lipscomb reported Saturday night he picked up two soldiers about 10:45 p. m. near Walter Reed Hospital. They told him to drive to Wisconsin ave. near the District line, but stopped him on the way by placing a .45-caliber pistol at the back of his neck, and then demanded his money, he told police.

He said he gave them $38 and then, at gunpoint, drove them to Kensington, Md., where the cab ran out of gas and they fled on foot.

While questioning him, police learned he was the same cab driver who reported May 16, 1948, that he picked up two civilians who held him up with a .45-caliber pistol and robbed him of $11 in cash near Adams Mill rd. and Harvard st. nw.

Under further questining, Lipscomb finally admitted the report of a year ago was false. He later admitted the report made Saturday night also was false, police said.

Carnal Knowledge of Girl, 8, Charged to Takoma Park Man

A 47-year-old painter yesterday was charged with having carnal knowledge of an 8-year-old girl, missing from her home eight hours Saturday night and believed kidnaped until she returned early yesterday.

He was identified as George William Humphrey, of 1212 Myrtle ave., Takoma Park, Md., who was held under $10,000 bond for his appearance today in Municipal Court. He was also charged with leaving after colliding in connection with a hit-and-run accident.

The child was picked up with two other children at Georgia ave. and Park rd. nw. late Saturday afternoon by a man who offered them money to wash windows. The other two children were given some money and let out of the car a short while later, but the man kept the 8-year-old girl with him until shortly before 2 a. m., when she was let out near her home, police said.

Police were given a description of the car, but it was not seen again until late Saturday night, when they received a report that the same car had collided with one driven by James S. Roberts, 22, of 4621 Lewis ave. se., at Blair rd. and Aspen st. nw., and had left the scene without stopping.

Police were given the car's license tag number and through this traced the car to Humphrey, whom they contacted by telephone at home. He appeared voluntarily at the Sixth Precinct station house about 2:30 a. m.

Humphrey declared that he had started drinking heaviy early in the afternoon and that the whole evening was a blank to him. He told police he did not remember ever seeing the girl.

The girl also had been drinking police said, and was not able to give a clear account of what happened during the eight hours she apparently spent with Humphrey. A physical examination indicated she had had sexual relations although there were no bruises or other evidence of force, they said.

2 Given Ride Robbed Him, Driver Says

Two men, one of whom was arrested as he returned home without a shirt, were charged with robbing a Falls Church, Va., man of $20 early yesterday.

The shirtless man, who reportedly lost the garment in a tussle with the victim, was identified as George E. Poindexter, 27, of 621 C st. sw. His companion, who was arrested by Arlington police, was booked as David P. McGognoy, 28, of 3318 5th st. se. Both were held for appearance in Municipal Court today.

The victim, John J. Pettit, told police he met the men in an after-hours club, and they asked him for a ride to Falls Church about 4 a. m. Shortly after they got into the car, one of the men slugged him, while the other took his money, he said.

Pettit pretended to be knocked out, so they put him on the back seat, and drove to Rosslyn, Va., where they stopped at a tavern, Pettit told police.

Poindexter left the car and Pettit jumped out, meeting Poindexter at the tavern door, police said. They tussled, and in the struggle Pettit said he tore Poindexter's shirt from his back. Both Poindexter and McGognoy then fled on foot.

Gardener Discovers Cache of Dynamite

C. M. Johnson, 2604 Lindell pl., Glenmont Forest, was doing a little Sunday gardening in his back yard when his hoe struck a board in the ground. Irritated, he tugged but soon found he had stumbled upon a wooden trapdoor.

Upon opening the door, he stepped back—startled. There in his back yard was a cache of dynamite and caps, it appeared.

The caps, he quickly noted, were a highly explosive kind, so he called Montgomery County Police at Silver Spring.

The desk clerk, James Doten, ruminated a bit and finally deduced: "I can't send any of those young policemen. They don't know anything about dynamite. I'll send Sergt. Alton Harding, he knows about blasting."

Soon the sergeant was on the scene.

"Everything's o.k. The dynamite isn't dangerous and I'm taking the caps home." The cache had been left by builders, he concluded, not bank robbers.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Now that summer is just around the corner, many parents are beginning to give serious thought to what the youngsters will be doing. Some will go off to camp for a busy and profitable month or so. Others will have plenty of chores around the house as well as time for play. Some families are fortunate enough to have a summer place at lekeside, beach or in the mountains.

As children grow older one of the best summertime activities is work. Unfortunately, this is not always as easy to arrange as one might think. In the "good old days" if the family wasn't on the farm itself, there was always Grandpa's place or Uncle Win's rolling acres that could provide some fine work experiences. Such opportunities aren't as frequent today. And yet it is just as important for our young people to have real jobs as it ever was.

Some schools are cooperating with homes in helping find worthwhile work for youngsters. Summer resorts, especially in State and national parks, provide jobs for a good many high-school and college youth. Jobs in office or factory can be "dug up." Some of our youth organizations sponsor work camps where youth can do worth-while jobs that help a community be a better place in which to live.

It's not easy—this business of finding a real job for the youngsters. But every effort should be made, for they'll profit greatly.

Mrs. Bacon, who has been in Europe and the Middle East several weeks, was present at the ceremony. She will return to Washington on Wednesday.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Robert Whitney, of New York. She wore an ice-blue satin afternoon frock with a halo of blue roses.

A reception followed the ceremony in the Hotel France et Choiseul courtyard where the bride and bridegroom had met less than a month ago.

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador to the United States, was a guest at the wedding and reception and others were David K. E. Bruce, United States Ambassador to France, and Mrs. Bruce; Warren Delano Robbins, jr., Mme. Paul Claudel, Mr. and Mrs. Burrall Hoffman and Mr. and Mrs. Henri Claudel.

Mr. Thomas is a well-known artist who has held eight one-man shows. He formerly taught at Cooper Union, and his paintings hang in the Modern Art Museum as well as other galleries.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late Robert Bacon, American Ambassador to France.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Happily Married to Fine Boy for Over A Year, Bride Tries Vainly to Correct His Unfilial Manner With Her Parents

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been happily married for over a year to a very fine boy, but there is one small fly in the ointment, namely, his manner of addressing my parents, and I would appreciate your evaluation of the matter.

John's mother passed away some months after we married, but prior to that I had called her "mother," which pleased her,—and I was brought up to think it the correct address of one's mother-in-law. However, John has no term-of-address at all for my mother, and he calls my father and other members of my family by first name.

Inasmuch as I know my parents feel a bit embarrassed when addressed this way, I have spoken to John about it several times, trying to get him to conform to general usage. But he tells me that since the loss of his mother, he cannot call anyone else "mother"; and having lost his father at an early age, the term "father" is unfamiliar to his vocabulary and would be difficult to use.

John is fond of my parents, and they get on well with him aside from this awkwardness; so I think it shouldn't be too difficult for him to use the more affectionate, respectful form of address,—and I wouldn't expect him to over-do it, of course. But may I have your opinion? C. B.

Manners Reflect a State of Mind

DEAR C. B.: It is my impression that John was an only child; and it's possible that after losing his father at an early age, he was cast in the role of "mother's little man" and kept pretty closely under her wing during years when his social attitudes were being formed.

In consequence he might have developed, quite unconsciously, a somewhat precocious air of co-equality in speaking with her; and his manner with your parents may be a diffident reflection of this. Moreover, if his mother clung to him solicitously, he may have lacked opportunity, in formative years, to get the knack of ready conformity to unfamiliar social usage.

Obviously your social conditioning was something else. You've had two parents all along, sufficient companions for each other no doubt; also brothers and sisters, it seems, for you speak of "other members of my family,"—and this broader picture suggests a more normal exercise in filial-parental dealing.

Try Creative Understanding

IN SAYING, "I was brought up to think 'mother' is the correct address of one's mother-in-law," you are citing an assumption derived from parental example, probably. If your parents habitually bespoke their parents-in-law thus, and if you fondly respect their behavior in general, it is natural that you would follow suit. But bear in mind that John was formed in another mold.

In my opinion, John's attitude calls for creative understanding, not dogmatic censure. He may be in conflict about filial sentiment,—starved for mature-type father-love and mother-love, a hunger inhibited since small boyhood, because he construed it to be unmanly weakness; and even now is afraid to face and ashamed to reveal it.

Also, due to mom-type rearing, he may be unconsciously hostile to his parentage, unconsciously guilty about it, and thus disposed to skip the words "father" and "mother" for comfort of mind. Lastly, it's possible your parents are too paternalistic, so that John feels unconsciously challenged to remind them indirectly that he's no child. Whatever the story, John's manner is defensive and criticism will only stiffen it, whereas loving acceptance "as is" may win him to your example in time. M. H.

About Recovering Brass Bed

Could you tell me the best way to cover the head of an old brass bed and what type material would be best to use? J. E. F.

Using a plumber's pipe saw cut off all nobs and protruding decorations. Pad the head section on both sides by sewing to the framework a heavy layer of cotton batting which has been basted to muslin. This can be done by using a darning needle and stitching back and forth through the entire thickness of the padding. Or, another good material for padding is an old clean comforter.

When the padding is firmly fastened make a slip cover of any fabric suitable for slip covers or plastic leather could be attractively used. Cut the cover so it exactly fits the shape of the head board and slips on over the top like a pillow slip.

You will find instruction and illustrations for ding this sort of job in "Home Decoration with Fabric and Thread" by Ruth Wyeth Spears (published by M. Barrow & Co., Inc., New York).

Could you or your readers furnish a recipe for "Crab Imperiale." If possible I would like recipes for both the style baked with a white sauce and another that seems to be just crabmeat and seasonings baked in a casserole. M. M.

I have not been able to find such a recipe. Could any of our readers help M. M.?

What method can be used to remove grape juice stain from a refrigerator? A READER.

You may be able to at least lighten the stain, by dampening a cloth with a mixture of half and half household bleach and water. Place the cloth over the stain and let it remain for an hour or so. Repeat if the stain is lightened but not completely removed.

What method can be used to remove rust from dull unfinished bathroom tile and the cement which holds the tile together? A READER.

Apply a rust removal product to the stain. This can be purchased at housewares departments and should be used according to directions which come with the product you buy.

It takes me forever

It wouldn't, Petunia, if you'd stitch different colored threads in the tops of each pair of new hose—using the same color, of course, for the two stockings that belong together.

Sunday Strike Again Stalls Scots' Trains

London, May 29 (U.P.).—More than 600 engineers and firemen on the northeast section of Britain's nationalized railways struck for the second consecutive Sunday today. They said they would go on striking every Sunday until their demands are met.

The government's nationalized airlines began running an "airlift" to Scotland to cope with an expected rush of stranded Britons.

Hundreds of trains throughout the region were stalled and thousands of weekend travelers were stranded in outlying districts.

The trainmen struck to protest an extension of their runs from 150 to 200 miles. Under the new system, crews would have to spend a night away from home, bringing back a new train the next day.

Johnson Defends Virginia GOP State Primary

Heathsville, Va., May 29 (AP).—Republican Candidate for Governor Walter Johnson today issued a statement defending the scheduled Republican State-wide primary.

The primary, he said, "is good and it is sound," and he called it a step in the direction of "restoration of two-party government."

Certain critics of the primary seem to be "under the wrong impression that the primary was launched by the State Central Committee and can be killed by that committee," Johnson stated.

"The fact is that the primary was launched by Virginia Republicans in State convention in Richmond April 23. The State Central Committee is a lesser body and cannot rescind that action even if it would."

Parkview Forum Is Established By A. M. E. Church

The Parkview Community Forum, sponsored by the Men's Club of Trinity A.M.E. Zion Church, 627 Park pl. nw., came into being yesterday during a meeting at the church.

Purpose of the forum was stated as: "To gather, digest and disseminate information and knowledge for public consumption and discussion, with the aim of furthering the advancement of racial understanding and to help prepare the Negro to take advantage of increased opportunities being offered him today."

The first series of discussions will be on the subject, "Surveying Community Interest," and will be held at Trinity Church Sunday afternoons, June 5 to July 24.

The Rev. William R. Jones, pastor of Trinity church, was chosen chairman of the forum's board of directors.

7 Ticket Handlers At Speedway Held Under Blue Law

Hagerstown, Md., May 29 (AP).—Seven more persons were arrested today in Washington County's "battle of the blue law."

All ticket handlers at a nearby auto speedway, they were charged with violating the ban on Sunday exhibitions. Booked at Hagerstown, each posted $7.45 collateral and was released.

This brought to 10 the number of persons arrested by Sheriff Joseph D. Baker in his drive to enforce the 225-year-old statute.

Yesterday Circuit Court Judge Joseph D. Mish announced he will call a special session of the grand jury to study the law. His announcement came after a jury deliberating a test case on the law declared itself "hopelessly deadlocked" and was dismissed by the judge.

$1,500,000 Raised By Jewish Appeal

The Washington division of the United Jewish Appeal has raised more than $1,500,000 of its $2,500,000 goal, Chairman Joseph Cherner announced yesterday. The money will be used to aid Jews in DP camps and in Israel.

The next solicitation meeting of the group will be a dinner of the Druggists' Division at 7 p. m. Tuesday in the Statler Hotel. Louis Safian, editor of an anthology, "Onward Israel," will speak.

Rome Radio Reports Ethiopia Revolt

London, May 29 (U.P.).—The Daily Telegraph quoted a Rome radio broadcast tonight as reporting that a revolt started in Ethiopia May 18 with an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Crown Prince Asfa Wassan.

The report, not confirmed, said 300 persons had been killed in heavy fighting near Addis Ababa, the capital.

Tydings Cool To Proposed Test Of B-36, Fighter

By the United Press

Charman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, was cool yesterday toward a House Committee's proposed performance test between a B-36 superbomber and the Navy's Banshee jet fighter.

The House Armed Services Committee suggested the trial in an effort to settle an Air Force-Navy squabble over the "invulnerability" of the big bomber.

Tydings said in a broadcast over station WBAL, Baltimore, that he did not want to criticize "what the House is doing, but it is too bad the attention of the country is focused on just two planes—the B-36 and the fighter."

He predicted that in any series of tests "in one case one would win and in another case, the other would win."

The House Committee on Tuesday will open an investigation of the Air Force's B-36 buying program, as well as the inter-service wrangle over its prowess.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

What Would We Write About If Printers Were Perfect?

Betty Hendricks of 5709 43d ave., Hyattsville, Md., notes that our morning contemporary recently carried a Hollywood column which included the lines:

"In 1904, she looked like any one of the many actresses on the screen who wore very blonde hair."

Betty thinks it rather remarkable that in 1949, some 45 years later, there's still not a gray hair in the head of the actress referred to—Jane Wyman.

ON, IN

Martha E. McBride of 3323 Stuyvesant pl. nw. is a former Cincinnatian who suggests that the name of our local Riverside dr. be changed to "Ohio ave."

Washington hasn't had an Ohio ave. since the Federal Triangle sounded the death knell for that unsavory stretch of street that ran behind the District Building. So Mrs. McBride thinks it's about time we assigned the name to a new street, and points out:

"Since there are no houses on Riverside dr., the change of name to Ohio ave. would not inconvenience anybody, or cause any resident to have to change his address. Besides, I think it would be a fitting reminder of the beautiful Ohio River to assign this name to a road which borders an equally beautiful stream of water."

Mrs. McBride's suggestion has a great deal of merit. However, I am also a former Cincinnatian, and I'll remind her that in the Queen City we used to have a favorite joke which illustrates a pertinent difference between Washington and Cincinnati.

During the Spring flood season, we used to refer to our home town as: "Cincinnati, which is always ON the beautiful Ohio, and sometimes IN it."

MYSTERY?

Phyllis Donelson of 1015 N st. nw. spent most of Tuesday's predawn hours trying to persuade the baby to go back to sleep.

During the course of the night she noted that the Capitol dome, visible in the distance, was brilliantly lighted — and wondered why.

So I asked Arthur E. "Gus" Cook, assistant architect of the Capitol, and got a surprising answer. He said the dome lights were NOT on.

His explanation was that the big floodlights went off at midnight, as usual, and that smaller lights continued to play on the statue atop the dome all night long—also as usual.

But when the atmosphere is foggy, these smaller lights sometimes make it appear that the whole dome is lit up, even when it's not.

"If that doesn't explain it," concludes Cook, "then you've got me stumped, because as far as I know the big floodlights went off at midnight."

PERSONAL NOTES

Robert C. Hosmer, 6303 Florida st., Chevy Chase, Md.: "Voice of America" broadcasts to Europe are too numerous to list individually. Between noon and 5 p. m. and between 5:30 and 6:15 p. m. (Washington time) nine different programs are aired on varying wavelengths, from 15.15 to 21.73 megacycles. From 9 to 10 p. m., news is beamed to Latin America on wavelengths ranging between 6.08 and 21.46 megacycles. The State Department can furnish more specific information.

Windsor Thompson, Glenn Dale, Md.: Herblock says that he originally drew the cartoon with the boat going in the other direction. But Reporter Marshall Andrews was kibitzing the job that day, and pointed out that the position of the oar and the course of the boat were incongruous. So Herb dashed off a new cartoon and almost missed a deadline doing it. Now he's ready to rent a one-oared boat to find out for sure whether you're right or Andrews is.

Betsy Marsh: Yep, that's where we get the expression "a dog's life." But you can make my life a lot easier by signing your address next time, so that I won't have to wonder which of the city directory's 149 Marshes is you.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Nine cute, lively, hardy kittens that we rescued from the roadside, where they'd been dumped to die." (Alexandria 3146.)

"AND TO THE REPUBLICANS FOR WHICH IT STANDS"

David L. Bazelon of 4704 Linnean ave. nw. is Assistant Attorney General and Alien Property Custodian. As you might suspect, there is frequent talk of Democrat vs. Republicans in the Bazelon home.

And of course little pitchers like 6-year-old Richard (Ricky) Bazelon always have big ears, and remember more of such dinner table conversation than their elders realize.

So it came to pass that Ricky was talking to a playmate the other day, and asked: "What kind of school do you go to?"

"Public school," replied the other lad. "And to what kind of school do you go?"

"I don't know for sure," mused Ricky, "but I guess it must be the Democratic school."

ADD NAMES

Asher D. Kahn of 2222 I st. nw. points out that the business agent for the Hoisting and Portable Engineers Union is Albert Derrick.

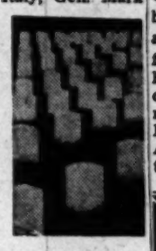
Pledge to War Dead Unfulfilled

By Drew Pearson

Musings on Memorial Day—The Nation kneels beside white crosses and beautiful monuments today . . . at Anzio, Italy, Gen. Mark Clark bows before the graves of boys who five years ago made a famous landing — and the supreme sacrifice . . . at Guadalcanal, in the Philippines, in France, near Kasserine Pass, there are white crosses, bedecked graves and heavy hearts . . . in the Southern States hearts also are heavy—not necessarily on this day, because officially Memorial Day is mourned separately. But in spirit the South will mourn, too . . . because Memorial Day has come to mean far more than a day of memory for the heroes of the War Between the States; it has really come to be a day when we recall our unfulfilled word to those who died to bring peace to the world—or so they thought.



A lot of mothers, a lot of veterans, a lot of fatherless children, a lot of widows will think of that unfulfilled pledge today. We should think of it on other days, but we don't . . . some of them will think of other Armistice Days, the fever heat, the excitement, the delirious, joyous, uncontrolled excitement of ending war.

There was Pennsylvania ave. on V-J Day, 1945—Sailors kissing pretty girls . . . torn telephone books and ticker tape . . . stalled streetcars with nobody caring whether they ran or not . . . a radio blaring forth: "Hirohito explains surrender to the Japanese people." . . . military police forced to retreat behind the White House gates. Joyous crowds, uncontrolled crowds . . . paper, paper, ankle deep . . . John McCrae's words still ringing from the last war: "If ye break faith with us who die, we shall not sleep" . . . Jimmy Byrnes, the Secretary of State, just returned from Potsdam. Jimmy Byrnes with the weight of moulding the peace of the world upon his shoulders . . . crowds milling around the State Department. They don't know it, and most of them don't care, but upon his statesmanship, his sagacity depends whether they will be celebrating new Armistice days, kneeling before more graves.

Then there was Philadelphia in 1918—or any other American city. But I was among those drilling near Philadelphia when crowds came up to the parade ground to shout that the Kaiser had fled, Germany had surrendered . . . seemed funny at the time not to have anything more to drill for. Like the bottom had dropped out of the world . . . crowds went wild . . . Woodrow Wilson was going to Paris. No more wars.

Woodrow Wilson did go to Paris—and Jimmy Byrnes went to Paris, London and Moscow. I saw him at the Palace of Luxembourg working his head off, keeping calm, trying to reap the results of victory. After him, George Marshall went to Paris. Now Dean Acheson. All were able, sincere, devoted men—devoted to the cause of peace . . . but all have failed so far, and Acheson warned before he left that the obstacles were great. He was not too hopeful of success.

However, the American people now realize that peace cannot be obtained solely by negotiation around the green baize tables of diplomatic conferences. For treaties in themselves mean little unless people carry them out . . . The statesmen who sign treaties may be dead tomorrow. The governments which ratify them may be out of office next week. But the people behind treaties go on forever . . . that is why the American people have come to work harder and harder at peace.

When the people of New England load up a ship and send food to England, when other people load up various friendship trains to Europe, when Americans write millions of democracy letters to the Italian people—that's working at peace. And it pays dividends . . . when the American people pay high taxes to finance a Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe, that's also working at peace . . . and the work still continues. Wichita, Kans., quite recently adopted the French city of Orleans . . . in Jackson, Miss., the R. E. Kennington department store has just donated an American wedding gown to a bride who may need a gown in Lyons, France—in return for the weddings gowns sent this country on the French gratitude train.

Peace is like matrimony—and the American people have come to realize it. No marriage is successful if two people merely sign a marriage license. And no peace is successful if two or more countries merely sign a peace treaty . . . peace must be an everyday living reality . . . there are no uniforms, no glamor, no brass bands marching down the road to peace. It's an unexciting, humdrum job—just as unexciting as peeling potatoes, which sometimes is so necessary to making a marriage successful.

Moscow now knows the full import of people-to-people friendship—In fact, Stalin probably would have given his eyeteeth to have the French gratitude train in reverse—to Moscow instead of the USA . . . because he has been boasting that the people of France and Italy and all Europe were the friends of Russia. And we showed him this was not the case . . . all of which illustrates why Acheson's real job at Paris is to pull up the Iron Curtain. As long as the American people can't get to know the Russian people, as long as the Kremlin can declare war overnight with no senate, no press, no church, no public opinion to exercise a restraining force, the danger of war will continue . . . no treaty with Russia is worth the paper it's written on. We know that from experience. The only worthwhile agreement with Russia is one guaranteed by the seal of friendship of the Russian and American people. That's why it's so necessary to work for the lifting of the Iron Curtain at Paris.

Number 17 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News

RACHEL POWELL, Supervisor of The Hecht Co.'s Phone and Mail Order Department, has the type of spark that puts super in the word "supervisor." This green eyed, soft spoken brunette hails from Ahoskie, North Carolina, where she was a telephone supervisor with the local Bell System. She has been in Washington, D. C., three years and with The Hecht Co. for the same length of time. On bright sunny week-ends, Rachel goes slack-happily hiking around the Washington countryside.

Livewires, To Serve You...

SAYS RACHEL POWELL, SUPERVISOR OF THE HECHT CO.'S PHONE AND MAIL ORDER SERVICE

When it comes to livewires . . . we'd like you to meet our 22 phone-order girls. They're our associates who make shopping at The Hecht Co. possible from your own living room.

Want that dress advertised by The Hecht Co., but can't get downtown to shop? Why, it's as near to you as your telephone . . . just dial National 5100 and ask for The Phone Order Service. Want to know if The Hecht Co. has powder blue silk shantung dress fabric by the yard? Our phone-girls can give you a speedy answer to that one . . . as well as any other questions necessary to help you make a telephone selection from the hundreds of thousands of items we sell. And what's more, they have to have this information handy in order to handle over 65,000 phone transactions a year . . . at times, as many as 225 phone purchases an hour. High speed service like this demands courteous, split-second efficiency . . . clarity of voice . . . ability to locate a buyer, an item or pertinent information about any request you might make. To this extent our livewire phone-girls are specially trained to help you with your remote-control shopping.

Rachel Powell also supervises our Betty Lane Mail Order Service. And talk about a popular girl . . . Betty's correspondence file looks like something out of the State Department. Not only does she enjoy a large mail order following from all over the United States, but has won herself fast friends in almost every country in the World. G. I.'s and their families abroad . . . embassy personnel who have returned to their native countries . . . have made The Hecht Co. their link with the Western World.

"We in the Phone and Mail Order Department are mighty proud," says Rachel, "to serve not only the people of Washington . . . but the people of the World. It's services such as these that make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop."

NOTE: The Hecht Co., Washington & Silver Spring, closed all day today in observance of Memorial Day.
